*"Ye will not walk ignoble ways;
Ye dare not seek unworthy aims,
Ye can not do a deed that shames
Those heroes of the holiest days!
Your oath a Roman oath must be,
Sworn on a faith that will not yield,
Sworn on the doubly sacred shield of Washington and Lee."*

He: "A glimpse of the mill—within these foreboding walls the eternal battle for the diffusion of knowledge is waged."

She: "Oh! How brutal."

He: "From this shady spot on the Campus you can see a group of professional mansions. Yes—they're always on time for classes."

She: "Oh, really!"

He: "The green—where the dear professors gambol."

She: "Oh! The little devils."

He: "This is known as Newcomb Hall. It contains the office of restriction. Some day they won't even let us eat."

She: "Horrible!"

He: "The Beanery, sometimes referred to by the elite as 'The Commons.' No, it doesn't mean that the patrons are common. Why even the Earl himself eats there."

She: "Oh! I see."

He: "Our natural amphitheatre, discovered A.D. 1922 and consecrated to the pitiful efforts of incompetent Shakespearians."

She: "Oh! But where is the stage?"

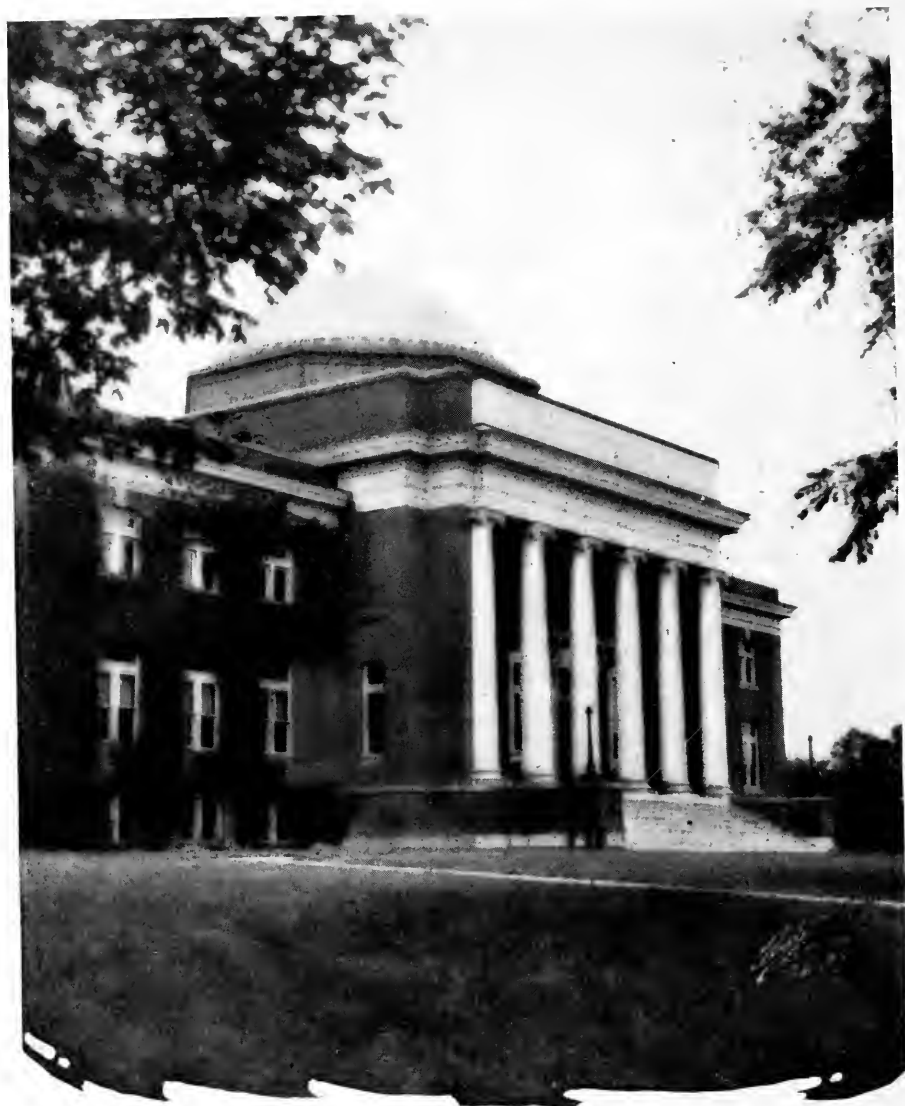

He: "The Gymnasium, erected through the generosity of Mrs. Parker Doremus."

She: "Oh! But she must have been fond of dancing."

He: "A learned man has said we are what we are because we are where we are. Then who can hold us responsible when we are here under an Easter Moon?"

She: "You shan't be blamed."

He: "And this, the Carnegie Memorial Library. Pretty in daytime and not a bad place at night."

She: "Interesting, at least."

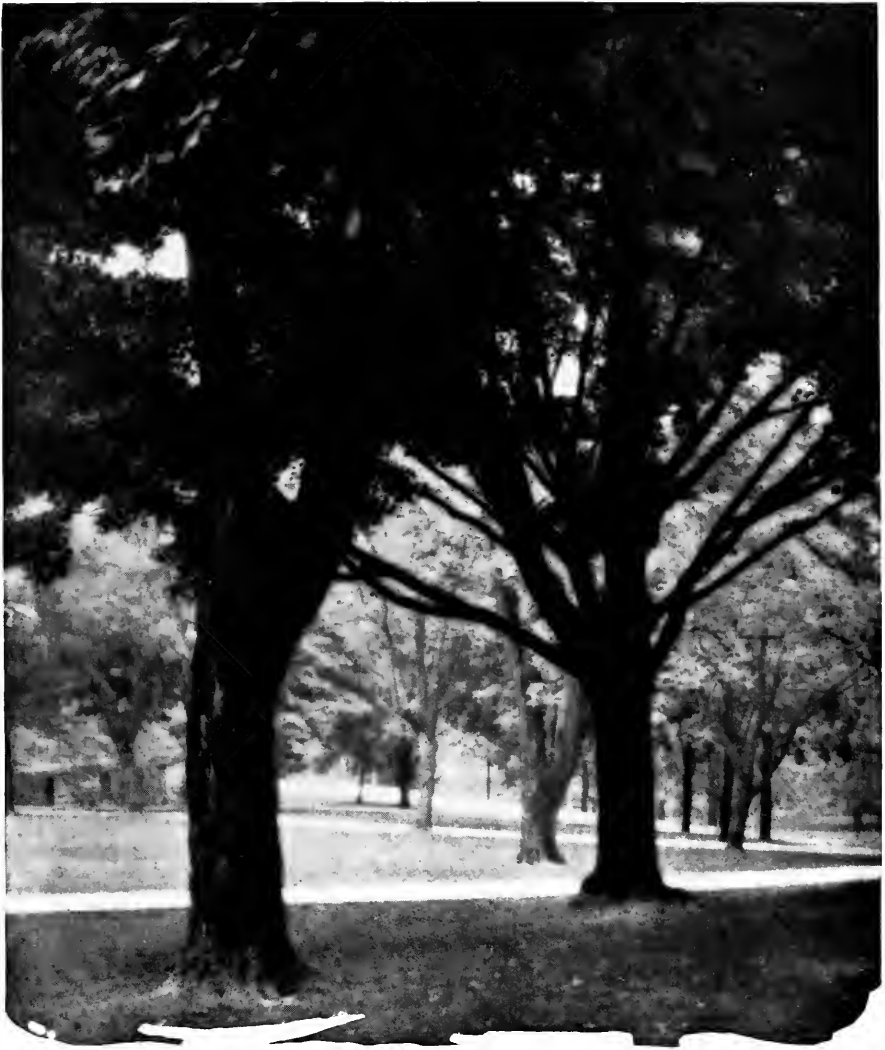

He: "This path leads to nine o'clock classes and Geology. One goes east, one goes west, and one goes north to the cuckoo's nest."

She: "Who's the cuckoo, please?"

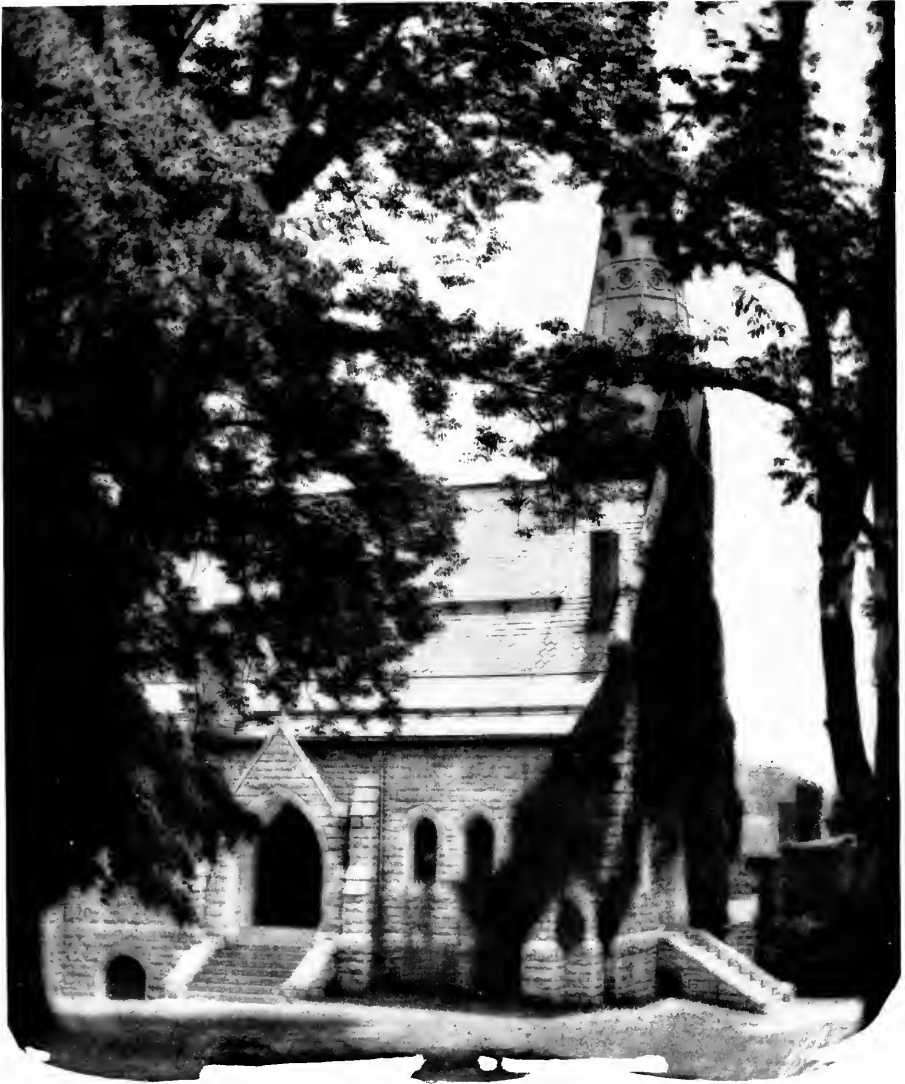

He: "One of our professor's homes facing the Campus."

She: "How pretty!"

He: "A glimpse of the Campus that is like a snatch of song—with the music unheard and the words unuttered."

She: "Now, please don't get romantic."

He: "And here is the Lee Memorial Church, one of the prettiest in the country."

She: "Really."

He: "The historic colonnade. The worn steps in the foreground lead to the Dean's Geology Museum, where you meet all your friends."

She: "It must be a popular place."

SAMUEL JOSEPH ADAMS

Richmond, Virginia

Φ K Σ; Δ Θ Φ.

The location of Joe's home is a mooted question. Ask him—he'll say the suburbs of Richmond. He got away with it fine at first, but upon gaining a little inside dope we find it is only ninety miles out.

Before entering our ranks, Joe had been somewhat of a rolling stone, having attended V. P. I. during the S. A. T. C., and the universities of Richmond and Virginia. Finally, he found the end of the rainbow and we have enjoyed his company for the last two years.

It might be well to mention in passing that he is not adverse to the company of the weaker sex and although he couldn't be termed an inveterate imbibor in the company of the girls, he has found sufficient local talent to attract his attention. We don't know who his favorite "pulse-quickener" is, but we respect his judgment.

Joe's place in college life will be a hard one to fill, as he is sincere in his work, true to his friends, and loyal to his school. Good-bye, Joe.

This stalwart son of Tazewell, after making a brilliant record at Emory and Henry College, as a student, athlete, and college leader, entered the Law School in the Fall of 1920. Having served his county as a justice of the peace for several years, thereby becoming learned in the law, he was able to master the mysteries taught in Tucker Hall with very little difficulty. However, as the above list of honors eloquently attests, "Forty-two" has not confined his activities to the class-room. His cheerful disposition and his ability to make friends has made him a popular man in his class.

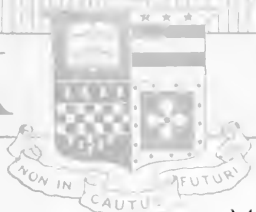

If the qualities of character and leadership which he has exhibited while a student, may be considered as a basis from which to predict the future, his success in the world is assured.

"Baldy" is one of the best known statesmen on the campus, not only to all students from "Doc" Holbrook's decade to the present Freshman Class, but also to the people of Rockbridge County, among whom he has sealed many strong friendships during his determined chase for a degree.

"Ben," so older students tell us, came to W. and L. from the University of Michigan. After one more year of academic study he decided that war might be all Sherman claimed and left in the Spring of seventeen, one of the first students to join the colors.

After cessation of hostilities, "Ben" again took up his college work; this time, however, he chose law. Those of us who knew him during his past four years can be nothing but grateful that he did come back, for to us it has meant the gain of a true friend. A friend loyal through all; absolutely frank, and efficient in all he undertakes.

Overseas Club; Graham-Lee Literary Society.

Always maintaining a high scholastic standing, "Frank" graduated from the Grafton High School with first honors, and from there he went to Pittsburgh Academy in Pittsburgh, and later to Duff's College.

Enlisting in the army in April, 1918, at Columbus, Ohio, he went to Camp Sherman, and in a short while was on the front at St. Mihiel and at the Argonne.

Before the war, "Frank" had passed the highest required test in shorthand for the departmental service of the government, and indeed proved himself to be an expert in stenographic positions while working in government service.

Having come here directly from the army in 1920 in order to take up the study of law, he has proved himself an excellent student. He has never answered "unprepared," and has generally given accurate answers to questions arising in class. He leaves the University an authority on all legal questions.

His honors and achievements are too many to enumerate. We will miss his active mind and steady influence in carrying out the principles for which we stand. His work on the Executive Committee and as cheer leader are worthy of special recognition and he will be greatly missed when we gather on the gridiron next Fall to cheer our team on to victory.

"Bob" has been and always will be a distinct credit to Washington and Lee, and we wish him the best of luck when he leaves us to take up his chosen profession in his native state of Tennessee.

Maurice, although born in Boston, Massachusetts, soon transferred his domicile, through no fault of his own, perhaps, to Charleston, West Virginia, and like other sensible West Virginians when the time came to choose a college he turned his face towards the Old Dominion and Washington and Lee.

Maurice came to Washington and Lee in 1920, after serving overseas with Uncle Sam's marines and taking part in several important engagements.

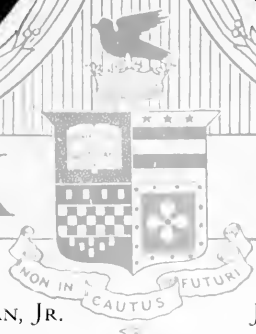

Since his arrival here he has made many friends and has demonstrated his sterling character and his ability as a student of the law.

A brave soldier, a brilliant student, a sincere friend, and a true gentleman, Maurice will carry with him when he leaves the good wishes of a host of friends and the certainty of a successful career in his chosen profession.

"T. P." or "Tommy" hails from that part of the State known as Tidewater, Virginia. "Tommy" left his native town six and a half years ago in quest of learning and other things. The first three and a half years were spent at Blackstone Military Academy. His ever-broadening vision, however, caught a glimpse of greater fields, and for the last three years he has faithfully pursued the study of law at W. and L.

A lover of literature and art, quiet, studious, cultured, but above all else a faithful, loyal friend—a gentleman of the highest type—all this and more can truly be said of the subject of this sketch.

It is quite probable that the business world rather than the legal profession will ultimately claim him, but regardless of the nature of his chosen vocation his friends predict that with such sterling traits of character his success is assured.

"Shorty" hails from West Virginia. Assuming all the tenacity of a regular mountaineer he has made a most impressive record in the Law School. Even the worst tickets have failed to stop him. The thermometer of his mental efforts hovers, both in the class work and on examinations, around the boiling point.

Dr. Long intrusted the care of the library to him, and even the most slothful student has been ready to obey his commands. So carefully has the librarian job been studied and surveyed, that the professors have no hesitancy in asking "Shorty" for any outside citation of cases.

The Bar of West Virginia must take note of his progress if he can practice law as well as he can chew tobacco, arrange equity books, and otherwise take care of himself in friendly arguments on the second floor of Tucker Hall.

When Kentucky went dry, "Bazz" packed his grip, combed his hair, and, despite the pleadings and tears of the co-eds at Kentucky State, boarded the W. and L. Creeper. Since then, by diligent work, he has progressed uninterruptedly until now, when he leaves Tucker Hall with the coveted LL.B. Then he will return to the place whence he came, there to make his fortune and fame.

But studies have not occupied all of "Bazz's" time, for he was a Varsity man in football at the University of Kentucky for two years, and has been on the squad here for the past two seasons.

"Bazz," we will miss your quiet manner, unassuming ways, sweet smile, close friendship, and your good-natured "gimme a cigarette" and "I aint no—neither." As you have been a true and sincere student, we know you will be a loyal and strong alumnus.

"Cy" entered Washington and Lee in 1919 after completing a thorough intellectual and social preparation at Princeton Prep. To relate his many achievements during his four-year stay in Lexington would require too much space, so we shall merely refer to the list of clubs and honors given above.

As President of the Cotillion Club, "Cy" deserves congratulations for his successful efforts to make our dances enjoyable. Combining in his versatile personality the courtly graces of "pre-jazz" era gentlemen with the accomplishments of the modern generation, "Cy" has endeared himself to the chaperons and debutantes alike.

On the Campus, his unusual ability to estimate the human elements of any situation has made him a leader, and his warm-hearted loyalty to his friends has won him a wide personal following.

"Shorty" is the busiest little man on the Campus, taking a very active interest in all branches of college activities. Though too small to make the Varsity football team, he was out with the "scrubs" doing his part. A badly injured knee put "Shorty" on the sidelines, but he was energetic enough to keep the fight in the Generals by assisting in the cheering.

He has made a host of friends on the Campus and is a man of whom W. and L. should be proud. In all of his many travels to W. and L. football games he branded himself as "Roaming Shorty." Notwithstanding his many trips he has managed to keep up in his work and we expect great things of him in a legal capacity.

You will be missed, "Shorty," and in all your many travels, drop back to Lexington occasionally, as a heart-and-soul W. and L. man (as you) is in great demand.

WILBERT HEDGEMAN HAYNES

Bingham, West Virginia

Charleston Club; Graham-Lee Literary Society.

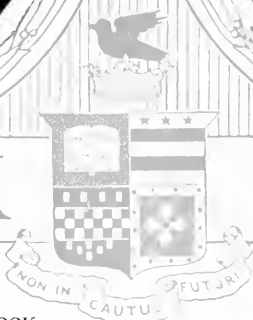

Man is not judged by his school activities alone but by his character plus the ability to accomplish telling results. "Chief Justice" is that grand old gentleman with the stately bearing and dignified mien who gets the coveted degree in June and then passes on to a life of perpetual success in the field of his chosen labor. He has been no social lion, but never has there gone from the Campus of Washington and Lee a man more scrupulous, more gentlemanly, more devoted to moral teachings.

Success comes only after determined effort coupled with a winning determination. Haynes has laid the foundation faultlessly, and deserves to win. With no grandstand flashes of action, but with common-sense movements, his work promises to be of that calibre which pleases clients and wins verdicts, and our prediction is that in a reasonable time he will have made his mark in legal procedure so that even standing room in his office will be at a premium.

"Doc" Holbrook, the grand old man of Washington and Lee! A familiar figure on the Campus since "what time the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," his departure from our midst will be felt as a personal loss by every man in the University.

With a wide range of experience, and possessing a brilliant mind together with a personality which inspires confidence and respect, Holbrook has long been a leader in the affairs of the Student Body. Few men in his time have exercised as wide an influence upon the opinions and actions of Washington and Lee men, and none have used their influence more unselfishly or wisely.

But however great his achievements on the Campus and in the classroom, it is not by these things that "Doc" will be remembered in the hearts of those who know him best, but as a friend whose friendship is an unflinching source of pleasure and inspiration.

Writing Senior write-ups is usually a bore, but it is a real privilege to be allowed to say a few words about "Rocky." He really deserves at least two pages, and even they could not hold a record of his achievements for Washington and Lee. "Rocky" is, and has been for the last three years, an outstanding figure in the Student Body. One of the students in the Law School, "Rocky" is not a grind but the essence of good fellowship. Were the history of the Student Body to be written, "Rocky's" administration as president would be one on which the historian must long dwell. In that office he unswervingly worked for the best interests of his electors without regard to criticism from either the Faculty or the Student Body.

Every honor that he could hold has deservedly been "Rocky's," from Phi Beta Kappa down.

"What did you make on property?" or "What was your holding in that case on contracts?"—hearing such questions you know "Hu" is somewhere near. Always he is up on his cases, and always he is talking law, which only goes to show his love for his work and indicates the kind of a student he has been.

"Hu" has not only been a wonderful student but he has always been a close follower of all athletic contests. If you know him you have heard about "our team up home" and the time that it defeated Williams Prep 145 to 5 in basketball.

Possessed of a happy, friendly and good disposition, John has made many friends here. We don't know yet just where he expects to put his shingle, but the Bar has gained a good Russian member, and where ever he goes he is sure to make good. Always loyal to Washington and Lee, he leaves us, proud of his Alma Mater, and an alumnus whom it can be glad to claim.

Φ K Σ; Φ A Δ; Executive Committee, 3.

Roger needs no introduction to the Student Body of Washington and Lee.

After a hard winter at the University of Alabama, Roger entered Washington and Lee in the Fall of 1919. He immediately distinguished himself as a golfer and all-around good fellow. At this time not even the wildest imagination could predict the success that this youthful prodigy was to attain before reaching man's estate.

Roger has the honor of representing the Senior Law Class on the Executive Committee. As a student he has consistently distinguished himself by making the Honor Roll. Because of his ability and learning he is known to his friends as "Doctor Jones," although, being modest, he prefers to be called "The Great Jones." As someone said that too much praise is belittling we will not attempt to enumerate all of Roger's accomplishments.

For Roger we predict a brilliant success in his chosen profession.

CLAUDE ALEXANDER JOYCE

Stuart, Virginia

Washington Literary Society.

Joyce received his A.B. from William and Mary College. Desiring to emulate the achievements of Virginia's great legal leaders he decided to enter Washington and Lee University, where, beginning with Introductory Law and struggling through the formidable array of subjects comprising the law curriculum (including that incomprehensible puzzle, Property III), he has successfully and with singular distinction mastered them all.

Joyce is a quiet sort of a fellow, a willing worker, steady, reliable, well liked, and popular with the boys in Tucker Hall. Having now finally equipped himself with a coveted W. and L. legal education and fortified by Professor Fulbright's effective course in Public Speaking, we can safely predict for this gentleman from Patrick County certain success whether in the realm of legal activity or in the political field.

BERNARD RILEY KENNEDY

Captain Kennedy, a veteran of Yale, the Naval Academy, and the United States Army, leaves us this finals after three years' service at Washington and Lee.

He added new laurels to his crown in his sojourn with us. Many consider Bernard to be one of the best informed men on the Campus.

In Tucker Hall the captain is rated with Blackstone, Wigmore, and Burks as an authority on the law and the reason thereof. He was elected by a unanimous vote President of the Intermediate Law Class, which shows his popularity.

Although the women worship him from afar, he refuses to allow that to turn his head. He tells us he has learned from experience and he's going to send his children to Washington and Lee without the intermediate trials at Yale and Annapolis.

"Judge" goes with the best wishes from his friends for an assured success in the practice of law.

"Hickey," as he is well known about the Campus, is one of the legal luminaries who hail from Virginia. After taking a year of academic work at Washington and Lee he found out that this was sufficient in his quest, so he set out on the road of thorns to seek enough knowledge to become a rival of Blackstone.

After two years of spending his mornings at Tucker Hall, his afternoons at the "Corner," and his evenings in a witty literary club presided over by "Capt." Schneider, our hero decided that he knew the law, and demonstrated it to everyone's satisfaction by easily passing the State Bar; all of which proves you can't keep a good man down, and a good little man—oh well, you've heard the story of David and Goliath.

But now in all seriousness—in bidding "Hickey" goodbye and wishing him God-speed and all the luck in the world—we are losing a good man, a genuinely loyal son and a charming personality.

STEPHEN DILL LEE
Greenwood, South Carolina

K A

If it is true that experience is the best teacher—behold a learned man! We believe that "Steve" has a scholastic record as enviable as it is varied. Originally from Greenwood, South Carolina, "Steve" entered the College of Charleston in 1908. Here he pursued his academic course for three years and then finished up at the University of South Carolina in two more. In 1914 he enrolled in the Law School at W. and L. His first year here was followed by a special course at the University of Chicago.

Between that time and '22, his life was a varied one. He taught at Donaldson Military Academy; served in the navy during the war period; took graduate studies in English at the University of Wisconsin, taught for two years at Staunton Military Academy; and September, 1922, found him back at W. and L.

A man whose morals are beyond reproach—reserved, studious, cultured—a gentleman in every sense of the word. Such a character will surely bring added glory to the famous name of Lee and honor to the legal profession.

Possibly Belroi did not dream of sending us such a personage as David. Being an orator by nature, a genius by exertion, and an editor by profession, there is no reason for success not attending him.

Law always attracted him. Such minor subjects as Property 3 were passed with a smile. When the degrees are conferred in June he will easily but honestly have earned one.

Back in Gloucester County the people are awaiting his return. No doubt but that the progress of his path toward success will be by way of the Commonwealth Attorney's office to the Attorney Generalship of the Old Dominion. "May this path have no curves too sharp nor bumps too rough for you, old-timer," is the wish of your friends of Washington and Lee days.

JOHN MELVIN LOVELACE

"Johnny" found that with the limited educational facilities offered him in South Boston he had better set out and see a little of the world. After reading an army advertisement showing how one could travel, get education and refinement through service in the army, he enlisted for the late unpleasantness. With them he went overseas and was shot in the Argonne, or the Sector, and when the Germans found they could not kill him, they begged for a truce, and he returned to the United States.

In 1920 he left the United States for Lexington, where for the past three years he has learned the law and the reason therefor.

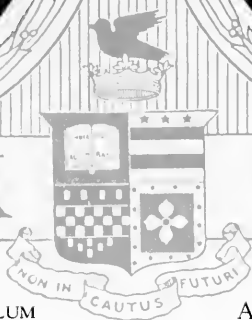

Melvin leaves a host of friends and we wish him success in the practice of his law. His activities have not been confined to Tucker Hall for he is regarded as an idol for the fair sex far and wide.

"Mac" came to Washington and Lee from U. Va. where he had graced the ranks of President Alderman's S. A. T. C. since its organization.

He cannot be said to possess that elusive something which makes Phi Beta Kappa of some of us, but "Mac" is a consistent student and it isn't often that the grave exponents of jurisprudence look over their following and experience the disappointment of seeing his seat empty.

For three years "Mac" has been one of the mainstays of the pitching staff—despite the parenthetical expression of the nether portion of that noble physique—and his technique has proven a nemesis for all those who sought to disturb the record of our baseball squad.

His friends are numerous and his fame widespread, and it is quite apparent that we will all miss "Little Mac" when he goes forth to maintain his reputation of always getting what he goes after.

"Al," as he is known to his friends, came to the Law School in 1920, preceded by a brief academic training at Southwestern University. While at Washington and Lee he has made many friends on the Campus and in the Law School. His classmates, recognizing his various merits, elected him to lead the Senior Law Class. "Al's" charming personality is by no means confined to the Campus but is very evident during the dances, from all reports by the fair sex.

After a three-year sojourn at Washington and Lee he leaves many associates who will remember him as a true friend, a scholar, and a gentleman. The excellent work done by "Al" in the Law School is only an indication of the success that the future holds for him.

In spite of his numerous trips (due to romantic love affairs) and the great amount of time spent in ascertaining the properties of various medicines, "Mac" advances from his Alma Mater, well prepared and ambitious to plead the cases of his fellow-men before the courts of justice.

"Mac" came to us from the University of Alabama, and during his sojourn here he tried himself out in the department of commerce for two years, but felt the call of the alluring and fascinating law.

But in spite of the aforementioned preparations and plans we are inclined to think that "Old Sister" will be an adventurer or a traveler or a figure in diplomatic affairs where his quiet, unassuming air, cool judgment, and wise counsel will mark him for admiration and esteem. However, we cannot attempt to enumerate all the possibilities and must look to the man alone for the result.

In the Fall of 1920 the University of Arkansas gave us a welcome gift in the person of "Piggy" May. His attractive personality and universal cheerfulness soon made him a popular man on the Campus. Not all of his time has been spent in social attainments, however, as he has done consistent good work in his studies. Moreover, after only two years in the Law School, he passed the Arkansas Bar last summer, an accomplishment seldom attained by a man of his age.

The fair sex is fond of Ewell, and he has been more or less smitten by the claims of a particularly attractive damsel, at least Dame Rumor has it so. In fact, we would not be at all surprised to receive the well-known announcement within a few months after he gets the coveted degree.

In all seriousness, "Piggy" is an all-around good man and is destined to be successful in his chosen profession. He takes with him the sincere friendship and best wishes of all who know him.

"Fran," also known as "The Chief," arrived in Lexington in the Fall of 1920. He started off his college career by appearing in the Thanksgiving production of the Troubadours. Although he was unable to participate in any athletic activities he showed good spirit in his willingness to help the cheer leader in any way he could.

He is studying law and it is rumored that he will specialize in "domestic relations" in the near future, and his partner will be a certain young lady from Youngstown, Ohio. It may be added that not a day passes but that he writes her a "young book" and we notice that he receives a very large correspondence in return. This is probably necessary in formulating plans for their future partnership.

Besides doing his college work diligently, "Fran" has found time to make many friends both in the University and in town who will all be sorry to see him leave. He has a pleasing personality and a cheerful smile. Best wishes for success follow him from here.

Brooks comes from Portsmouth, Virginia, and after a sojourn of three years at Randolph-Macon College (where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts), he decided to cast his lot with the disciples of Blackstone. So we find him at Washington and Lee in the Fall of 1920 with this definite goal in view. That he will be an attorney is now an assured fact, he having been presented his Virginia "to-wit" after but two years of study. Realizing the importance of a well-rounded knowledge of his profession, he returned, this session, to get the coveted sheepskin. While he is not a leader in his classes, nevertheless, "E. B." is to be numbered among that decidedly more fortunate group of men who make the leaders step.

Those who have been fortunate enough to hear his orations and debates at the Washington Society and his handling of cases in the Phi Delta Phi Moot Court have no hesitancy in predicting for him great success in his chosen profession.

Out of the Great Golden West came our little Lidell. He was heralded by his famous brother, "Hippo," some few years ago. His brother prepared us for him, but he failed to mention innumerable talents that "Jess" possesses. In his first year Lidell was one of the main organizers of the Troubadours; in his second year he was director of that organization; in his third year, president; and in his fourth year, director.

In addition to his histrionic and directorial ability "Jess" is quite a social leader. Last year he lead the fancy dress ball; and this year, the "13" Club Cotillion.

One may also see that Lidell is an executive of no mean ability, having held the Presidency of Phi Alpha Delta, Troubadours, his Chapter of Sigma Chi, and the "13" Club.

He leaves the University this year with a host of friends, and they bid him God-speed in his chosen profession.

Emmett is getting to be almost a landmark here. After obtaining his mark as Phi Beta Kappa the same year he got his A.B. degree he entered the Law School. Since that time he has played the part of both student and teacher, and in both roles has met with great success. If there are honors to be gotten, you can safely look for Emmett to get them, and in a simple, easy-going way. Not even in debates can emotion control him; his personality is striking, and behind him is something that adds force to everything he undertakes. This same personality has won many friends for him and of that calibre that will stick.

When Emmett takes up the practice of law we can depend on him to make it work for the public good, for he is a man of a forceful, driving, and determined will-power.

Besides being an excellent student, Ralph is an ardent supporter of the Big Blue Teams, and when one sees the blue warrior on the warpath, Ralph is usually seen on the sidelines lending his support with a vociferous voice.

Ralph boasts no banner and flaunts no flags. His aim is not to move the world but simply to gather the fruits of his efforts as they ultimately mature and to be a friend to man.

Love's birthplace is in Chilhowie, Virginia, and he is a true example of the geographical area which he represents. A genial nature, a true friend, a polished politician, a sound-minded business man and a promising lawyer.

Love first went to Marion High School, later he attended Fork Union Military Academy, and then he came to Washington and Lee. With his departure from Washington and Lee he carries the good wishes of his friends, and leaves by his past example, assurances of a most successful future.

Whatever pathway he may choose, if history repeats, will unquestionably lead to success—for the past of Love Bonham Rouse has been a consummation of loyalty, industry, ability, and tact.

In graduating, he carries with him the respect and confidence of all with whom he has been associated.

After helping Uncle Sam bring the world war to a successful close, "Rum" entered Washington and Lee in the Fall of 1919. With the determination of Ponce de Leon searching for the fountain of youth, "Rum" is on the trail of the fountain of youth—knowledge. Everyone knows "Red" and, moreover, everyone likes him, not only because of his athletic ability, but for his wit and good nature. He has been at W. and L. only three years, having previously attended the University of Virginia, and having served in the A. E. F.

"Red's" basketball prowess is evidenced by his election to the captaincy of the team after only one year on the "Varsity."

"Red" and his Ford were inseparable until a short time ago, when a handsome Buick roadster alienated his affections. Don't think that he is not strong for the ladies, though. Also they are strong for him. Several little flappers claim him as their "Red Wing." In fact, a whole camp of the South's most beautiful daughters fell for him last Summer.

Whatever "Red" makes his lifework he will just naturally be successful, as he has the greatest requisites for success—a sterling character and a pleasing personality.

Shelton has everything a real student of Washington and Lee should have but a good right arm, and he lost that in the service of his country. As a congenial companion he is one whom it would pay to be with while traveling many miles. He mixes an unusual amount of real ability with his likeableness, as his unusual record in the Law School illustrates. Besides being a good fellow and a scholar he is a real patriot.

In the Spring of 1921 he organized an army to aid in the enforcement of the 18th Amendment, and did his work so well that he aroused the jealousy of our noble Lexington police force, who forced him to abandon his enterprise. Claude is one who has wielded considerable influence on our Campus and has consistently been one who has made for a better and greater Washington and Lee.

West Virginia can never forget the smiling troglodyte who, with impunity, ploughed holes through their hitherto unpermeated line, and held them to a tied score.

Being an unusually practical man, George embarked on a business enterprise soon after coming to Lexington, and his close application to his business deprived many Campus activities of his talents but was not permitted to interfere with his study of law. George has already sought and gained admission to the Virginia Bar and we rejoice in the success which we know is to be his.

From the time of his arrival on the Campus four years ago, his rise has been swift and sure, as is clearly evidenced by his election to the Executive Committee his first year here and to the same office during his fourth year—a double honor rarely ever received.

But those who know Jean do not wonder at his success for they realize his depth of character, his insight into affairs scholastic and social, the warm brilliance of his ready wit, and his genial likeableness. Washington and Lee recognizes Jean Ellis as a student, as a friend, and as a man.

A true Southern gentleman—that's "Pat"—a man among men and a friend to all. "Pat" took his preparatory work at Emory College. In 1917 he left Emory, and after serving two years in the Ordnance Department of the Army as Engineer of Tents he came to W. and L. in 1919. Though he is getting an A.B. degree here—and an honor man in all departments—he has especially distinguished himself blowing up test tubes, etc., around the chemistry lab. He was not with us in 1921-1922, but returned for the 1922-1923 session to run the chemistry stockroom and obtain his degree.

"Jud" has had quite a checkered career for one of so staid actions. He is an Alabamian by birth, a Floridian by migration, a Virginian by coercion, and a South Carolinian by desire. Being thus so widely known, his popularity at Washington and Lee has been meteoric.

"Jud" was in the world war and was kept overseas for nearly a year. It was after this conflict that he laid aside the regalia of a business man and became the ardent devotee of a higher calling. His sincerity of purpose can best be understood by examining the records of the Registrar's office and thus realizing why he gets his degree in three years.

Being able to do things when called upon he has been called into service in numerous school organizations.

May good luck and prosperity always accompany you, "Jud."

FRANK BENJAMIN HURT

Ferrum, Virginia

Hurt made his first appearance upon the Campus in the Fall of 1921. He decided that W. and L. was the proper place to win that coveted sheepskin, after having spent a couple of years at Randolph-Macon. He came to us with an enviable record which he has maintained while here by his consistency and studiousness.

High and exalting though his class-room work must appear, it is not chiefly as a student but as a man that he affects us. He possesses those sterling qualities that make for success. All his interests are directed toward a purer and freer development of whatever is noblest in life. Into everything that attracts him he throws himself with feverish energy. We feel sure in our prophecy that whatever profession he may decide upon, we shall count him as a leader.

ANDREW EMERSON JOHNSON

"Hiram" is another of those illustrious lads from the Mountaineer State who displayed good judgment in the choice of a future Alma Mater. Finishing Alderson High School with honors he sought to carry on the good work at W. and L., and by his diligence has made his course in three years. Physics and "Sissy" held no terrors for him, and for two years he found sport in "Toady's" Greek classes. His latest hobby has been "star gazing" from Reid Hall.

"Hiram" isn't as vociferous as the California Hiram, but, on the contrary, he is of a somewhat reticent disposition. He is a likely and likable good fellow, and if he goes after everything in life as he has after his studies, there'll be no doubt as to his success.

We are not sure what use Emerson expects to make of his knowledge, but we are sure that he will make friends, many and true, just as he has in college, whether he takes to teaching, business, or sky-piloting.

There, at Lynchburg High School did he prepare for college, entering Washington and Lee in 1919, upon what has proven to be an unassuming yet highly successful college career. His scholastic work has been done in a careful, conscientious way, reaping the rewards of a good record. Too, he has taken an active interest in University life as evidenced by the extensive line of college honors accredited to him.

"Bill" is a man most congenial, but still of the sort that possesses an ever-increasing friendship and love which grows and grows with every meeting.

As a student, George has an enviable record. He has done hard and consistent work since he attended his first class four years ago.

As an athlete, he has served on the Varsity Teams in boxing, crew, and tennis. He has served three years on the Blue and White Tennis Team, being captain this year.

George has shown interest in religious work on the Campus. He has supported the "Y," and served as vice-president of that organization for a time.

There have been very few social functions since Mason put on his Freshman cap that he has missed. George is what everyone terms a good all-round fellow.

Some years ago, after first winking at the sun from the neighboring "Hilly City" of Lynchburg, and finishing prep work at New London Academy, he entered our sacred portals during the rigorous days of the S. A. T. C. Not content with the inadequacy of the regular iron-clad curriculum as a complete college education, he has engaged in other activities designated as strictly "collegiate." Last Spring, "Merry" developed an astounding genius for things political, was elected to office, and has justified the honor by making an efficient Secretary of the Student Body.

Not content with pulling down A's and B's in Economics and Commerce, Pass went in for extra-curricula activities. He stands high in the Graham-Lee Society, and has won two monograms and a medal in Cross-Country. For the last two seasons he has been a member of the Varsity track team, and one of Coach Fletcher's "dependables."

Fred's big attraction outside of W. and L. is R. M. W. C. We haven't learned the young lady's name—yet—but we venture to predict ere long it will be Mrs. Pass. "F. E." confidently tells us that he expects to enter the banking game, and in this field of endeavor, for which he is well qualified, we wish him success.

You ask who is that intellectual, black-haired man with the bearing of an "Admirable Crichton"? Why that is Fred T. Peebles of Columbia, Tennessee.

Vanderbilt University claimed him first. He decided to learn and travel, and thus his presence at Washington and Lee is accounted for. It was Fred's innate modesty that prevented him from becoming a leader in Campus affairs. Despite the lack of these so-called honors, he has managed to gain and to hold about him a circle of friends.

All great men have certain hobbies, and so with Peebles. He likes a good pipe. Also he likes nothing better than to get hold of a good book. He has a deep appreciation for literature of the better kind, and can at the same time appreciate the regular run of books. Many are the times he has persuaded Dr. Shannon to reconsider his criticism or praise of a certain book.

Fred intends teaching next year.

He startled us again in 1920 by having a girl up to the dances. Since then he has been startling the Faculty quite often by his brilliant remarks in class and his ability to tell them more about their subjects than any other member of the class.

Before coming to Washington and Lee, Frank prepped at Central High School of Birmingham, Ala., and at McCallie School at Chattanooga, Tenn., where he won honors as a debater. He used his oratorical ability to be elected President of the Freshman Class, but since then has thought other lines to be more suitable to his taste. For the last few years Henry has employed himself in the task of climbing higher and ever higher in his search after knowledge, interspersing it with periods in which he would impart this knowledge to others.

He came to Washington and Lee with two years of college credit from Lynchburg College and University of Virginia Summer School. Henry has identified himself with various college activities and in each he has displayed a seriousness of purpose and determination which never ends in failure. His thorough grasp and mastery of his courses peculiarly fits him for his lifework—that of "teaching young ideas how to shoot."

After winning for himself that coveted "ship-skin" in June, not content to settle down with his "lady-fair" yet, it is very probable that he will go on in search of further knowledge and not stop until he has captured the enviable M.A. and even a Ph.D. degree.

Having finished, with great success, Dr. Howe's favorite General Inorganic Course in Chemistry, "Marl" busied himself with the more advanced courses, and due to natural aptitude, assisted by much hard work, he became assistant in the department, and in his Senior year was elected a member of the Chi Gamma Theta fraternity.

Rhodes' enviable career is the result of a certain combination hard to defeat—work and ability. Grades above the average for four years prove that he is a fine student; service on three publications establishes his place as a journalist; the managership of the '23 Basketball Team is a fitting recognition of his capacity in that field. Rhodes has spent his time at college unusually well.

The above achievements, however, have not consumed the whole of his effort. Few "bull sessions" have been conducted within his reach at which he was not present. Being of an unselfish nature he has given to many fluttering hearts, from Randolph-Macon to Sullins, unforgettable thrills.

We will not speak of the bright future which his record predicts, but we know that it holds for him those college friendships which will not fade and cannot die.

Good humor is a constant part of "Woody's" make-up. It is almost impossible to see him without his smile, a smile which will probably make him a prominent doctor when he takes up that profession seriously. It is fortunate that the pre-med course requires so much chemistry, for in the lab, "Woody" has found a sure means of cheering up his co-workers at times when they would ordinarily feel any way but cheerful. Then, too, one can always depend on him to stick to whatever he has to do until it is done in the right way.

If cheerfulness, humaneness, willingness, and steadfastness are qualities which make a good doctor, we can safely say that "Woody" will reach a high mark in his chosen work.

However, it was strenuous work, so now he is back in the "social classes," leaving no stone unturned which might possibly conceal some pleasure.

Rudolph often reminds us that he is an engineer, and verifies this by numerous accounts of his work on the Mississippi levees last summer. According to the number of darkey laborers he says he pulled from the angry and turbulent currents, it seems more plausible that life saving should be his chosen field of endeavor.

Aside from all satire, Washington and Lee loses a worthy son of whom she may well be proud. "Rudy" is a man four-square and genuine, of genial disposition, optimism not excelled by Coué's, and countless other sterling qualities. We say that he will be a good engineer. Luck to you, "Rudy."

Josh Billings once said to a youthful protege, "Consider the postage stamp, my son, its usefulness consists in its ability to stick to one thing until it gets there". Kilmon has learned this lesson and has learned it well.

Quiet, unassuming, unobtrusive, he takes a lively interest in his fellow man. He has a large number of friends among both sexes, which is to be expected since he possesses the true basis of friendship—the quality of being a real friend himself.

And it's there that I would be,
In the shadow of the mountains,
Back at Washington and Lee.*

Winding lazy round the hill,
To the dear old College Campus,
My thoughts are turning still.*

And I know they say to me,
Come you back, you old Alumnus,
Back to Washington and Lee.*

Lack of space prevents us from saying all we would like to about "Alex." As a student "Alex" studied and made grades far above the average. As a workman (for he earned the majority of his college expenses) he was efficient and reliable. As a Christian he is outstanding.

Those who knew him best liked him most and manifested their friendship in many ways. During his college course he was elected Secretary-Treasurer of the Student Body, a member of the Campus honor society, Omicron Delta Kappa, and President of the Y. M. C. A. The future holds great success for Alumnus Alexander, '23, because he is ready to contribute his ability wherever he may find it most needed. He has the sincere good wishes of his fellow students and the Student Body as a whole which he has served so conscientiously in various capacities.

"Charlie," the Bustling Broncho Buster from the Wild and Woolly West. He transferred from A. & M. College, and coincident therewith transferred his bustling activities from bronchos to Fords. We suspect that "Charlie" is a "ward-heeler" in his home State. He is getting a degree in Commerce which presages good for the Commonwealth of Oklahoma when this distinguished son gets enough constituents to place him in the governor's mansion.

During the summers, "Charlie" goes far afield from the routine of business. Every July finds him with the militia at Fort Sill, where he may be picked from the mob by his two silver bars. If Oklahoma is not careful, Uncle Sam will have him yet.

"Charlie" has been with us two years only, but in that time his friendly disposition has won for him a place in our hearts. "Charlie," we can only hope your career in business life will be attended by as much success as was your work in college.

There is not much doubt that the rolling stone between college campuses gathers little intellectual moss, and exceptions, of course, only prove the rule. At any rate there is at least one exception at Washington and Lee. During the S. A. T. C. and the following year, "Whart" was a student at Colorado College. The call for the east brought him to Washington and Lee in 1920.

At first he under-estimated the strength of that call and spent a semester at the University of Kansas the following year, only to decide that W. and L. was the one place in the world to get that coveted degree.

In spite of his wanderings, "Whart" is truly loyal to Washington and Lee. In 1920 he was awarded a monogram in track. In his Senior year he was elected to Alpha Kappa Psi (Commerce) fraternity. In June he receives his degree from W. and L., and leaves this institution with the best wishes and highest regards of all who know him.

Perhaps, at first thought, the close of this school year does not mean much to the world at large, but to Washington and Lee as a whole it means the loss of our "Eddie" Crockett, a social leader among society men, a student among students, a politician among politicians. His four years have been spent in real labor, and as a fitting climax and a just reward he is to lead the Final Ball this year.

To narrow the competition of ladies to lead Finals with him, Eddie took unto himself a very charming young lady, Miss Victoria Cofer, as a wife. If there is a club "Eddie" does not belong to, it has not elected during the past four years. After Finals, a host of friends will chant "every day and every way we'll miss you more and more."

After spending a peaceful year at Washington University, "Doug" came for excitement to join our throng here. He came from Missouri, but he showed us that he is the Campus mocking bird. "Doug," besides innumerable other enviable qualities, has graced Troubadour shows for the past three years.

Although he has had recently conferred upon him the degree of B.S. in Commerce, we have a sneaky suspicion that he will sing, professionally, and let someone else care for his commercial and financial matters.

The brief space will not permit us to dwell at length on his trips to Hot Springs, but we find he is always in demand where the ladies are around.

Optimistic by nature, generous of heart, loyal to his work, these are some of the qualities that make "Doug" so well liked by his college mates, and that will bring him success in whatever he chooses to do.

From the name of "Student's" celebrated home town we would expect to find him a "Hard rock," but this is far from being the case, except while on the gridiron or diamond. Then it isn't very healthy to bump up against him. Very few men upon completing their four-year course can say that they have as consistently held the affection and esteem of the Student Body as has "Student." Many honors have come his way, but they have been unable to make him forget to be himself or how to be a true friend.

Frew has an unusually comprehensive understanding of human nature and a corresponding appreciation of its frailties—hence the tact and consideration with which he treats his fellow men. Whatever his life field may be we hazard the prediction that his operations will be remarkably free from friction.

"Bill" is a distinguished son of the old Bluff City. After graduating from Culver he entered the Commerce School of W. and L. in the Fall of 1919 where he has made an enviable record as a student. His commanding personality and unusual ability made him a leader of college activities. A glance at the list of his attainments will give some idea of the unlimited scope of his endeavor. The great esteem in which he is held by his fellow students was evidenced by his election to the highest Campus honor—President of the Student Body.

Never blinded by petty jealousies or personal feeling he has become a strong advocate of the right, and an opponent of anything contrary to the best interests of W. and L.

JAMES UPSHUR HYDE

"Judge" entered Washington and Lee last Fall as a Junior in the School of Commerce. Turning back to the Fall of 1914 we find him a "rat" at Virginia Tech where he stayed until 1916. The next two years were spent in achievements along other lines. The war found him in the S. A. T. C. at the University of Richmond. Two years of service as assistant bank cashier in his home town were added to his list of activities when "Judge" decided to come to Washington and Lee.

Since his arrival he has attended strictly to business and has made good in every sense of the word. Carrying an unusually heavy course he has made an enviable record and has accomplished his ends with an efficiency that marks him out for success in his chosen career, banking. The best wishes and confidence of his friends go with him. It seems a certainty that before many years we will find him an important cog in the financial machinery of the nation.

"Dick" entered the halls of Washington and Lee in the Fall of 1919—a deed which we have always been glad he did. As a student of learning, "Dick" had been quite proficient, and as a student of Campus affairs he has been in the foreground consistently.

With the advent of the new system of conducting the Fancy Dress Ball—being under the direction of the Troubadours—"Dick" holds the honor of being the first leader of the ball when chosen by a representative body of students. Not only in social functions is he prominent but in other activities, for as manager of the 1923 baseball team, he has proved most efficient.

"Dick" is quiet and unassuming in his ways and is a true gentleman. His position among the students will not easily be filled. He is backed by the Student Body in whatever walk of life he enters.

Albert Kelley is one of the most likable men ever on the Campus. Bluff, good natured, able—he has risen steadily until now he stands near the top. His career has been featured by marked ability along literary lines.

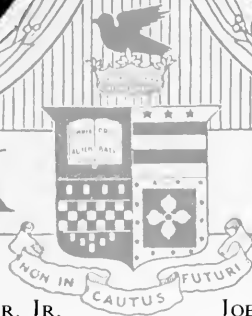

A steady flow of "ye olde bulle," a plentiful supply of real gray matter, and a personality that is bound to attract, are attributes of the husky West Virginian. Albert leaves the Campus amid the sincere regrets of a lot of well wishers among students, Faculty members, and townspeople.

Among the outstanding features of the Class of '23 we find him—just plain "Red." He came to us from the Martinsville High School in the Fall of 1919, and lost no time in taking part in many of the Campus activities. He has taken his credit and his glory with that manly spirit characteristic of the ideal—the spirit of modesty, of self-equality. Possibly that is why he is so generally known, respected, and admired by his fellow students. And so we might go ahead and tell of his many successes in the activities, but enough is said when we add that he has been a boon to every enterprise that he has ever entered.

"Wahoo" blew in from the plains of Arkansas in the Fall of 1919, becoming a member of the famous "Fighting Generals" football team of '19 and participating in every game that year. Since then he has been one of the most dependable football players on Wilson Field, being pressed into service at almost any position on the team. Not only in football but also in baseball and basketball he is the same old reliable "Mac."

Our best wishes go with him in his future career. What we lose by his splendid character, personality, and ability to succeed, the business world will gain.

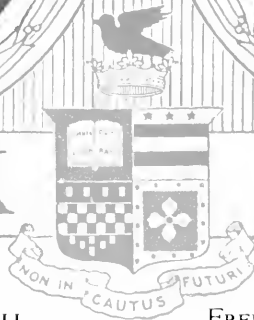

He is one of the most popular men on the Campus and has the name of being one of the hardest workers. Ten Varsity letters, and an A.B. degree with high marks in four years is a record achieved by only a few.

Good luck, "Mac," you will be badly missed in the ranks in years to come, but we are proud to put such a man as you in the Alumni column as being a product of W. and L.

"Mac" would surely be placed in the leader class if all students were classified as a follower or a leader. His first office, that of President of the Freshman Class, shows that early in his life at W. and L., his fellow students recognized his ability.

McGill has been a good student. He has completed, with credit, four years' work in three years' time.

He has also taken part in many outside activities. He has participated in athletics as a member of the Cross-Country Team and of the Wrestling Team. In the field of publications, he has served with credit on the Mink staff. In social circles, when the dances and parties come around, "Mac" can always be counted on.

The business organization that McGill secures a position with will have a valuable man, because he possesses both personality and ability.

FRENCH RAYBURN MCKNIGHT

"Mac" does not claim to be a "shark" in any one branch of college activity, but has tried them all and acquitted himself with credit. "Mac," realizing that a thing worth while is worth doing well, has accomplishments which show that he always carried out this theory in practice.

French is of the type most needed at Washington and Lee—always steady and dependable. His talents are so numerous that it would be a task to even mention them, yet we cannot overlook his way with the ladies, and the presence of his smiling face at the dances will be missed by more than one of the weaker sex.

"Mac" numbers his friends by his acquaintances, and a prediction for his future could but include the best that life has to offer. A successful student, a genial friend, and a natural gentleman of clean habits, he is the kind of man whose going we must regret.

There isn't anyone who knows "Monk" that doesn't like him. His popularity is attested by the fact that he was unanimously chosen by the Student Body as President of the Athletic Council. In recognition of his football ability he was chosen—again unanimously—by his teammates as their captain for the 1922 season. And an admirable captain he made, until misfortune placed him on the injured list for the remainder of the season.

His athletic ability isn't confined to football. This is his third year as backstop on the baseball nine.

"Monk" belongs to many honorary societies on the Campus. Naturally modest, and of a good disposition, it is easy to understand his popularity. With these natural abilities, the future can hold nothing for him except success. And no one will be a better representative of his Alma Mater than "Our Boy Monk."

"G. Herbert," better known to his friends as "Smitty," came to us from the University of North Carolina in '21. Due to his consistent cheerfulness and good disposition he has become one of the best liked men on the Campus.

He tells us that he hopes to achieve success in the field of insurance after leaving school. If we are to measure his success in that capacity by the success that he has made while at Washington and Lee, we feel certain that his ambition will be fully realized. His strong determination, coupled with his ability to make friends, is bound to cause him to reach any goal he desires.

The old Editor-in-Chief, David Raymond Snively, needs no introduction, but we might attempt to chronicle a few steps from an innocent and unsophisticated Freshman from the wilds of Hagerstown to a wild and audacious Senior from innocent and unsophisticated New York.

"Toad" started off his Freshman year with a bang and has been going in "high" ever since. His interests in activities have been many and varied and he has the unusual honor as a result of having made the Omicron Delta Kappa Society in his Sophomore year. "Toad" leaves this year with the distinction of being one of the most capable and popular men on the Campus. Possessed of a winning grin, a happy disposition, high ideals, and big ambitions, he should make a real success out of life.

Behold! Another "Mountaineer" cometh to Washington and Lee seeking knowledge in the fields of economics and American history. This time it is none other than "Dick" Thompson, who, though late in arriving, reached here in time to complete his last two years of college work.

This son of the New Dominion made his advent here in 1921, after having sojourned at West Virginia Wesleyan for awhile. We understand, while at the Methodist school, "Dick" was a Campus leader of the first rank. His activities ranged all the way from business manager of the school paper to the manager of the football team.

But with more serious purposes in view, "Dick" settled down to real work on entering W. and L., and has made a name for himself as a student.

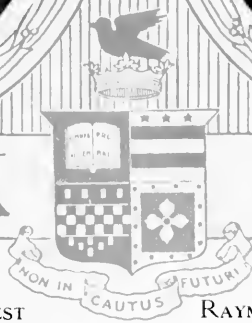

"Dick" leaves to enter the banking business, and if his success at Washington and Lee is indicative of his future, he will be numbered among the "big men" in his profession.

George, or "Shorty," is a worthy product of the "Old Dominion." Although he would not take the prize in a tall man's contest he is a man for every inch he carries, and in his Freshman year distinguished himself by winning his bout in a wrestling meet with Virginia. His accomplishments were not limited to physical prowess, for, for four years he has been a consistent ground-gainer on the "intellectual gridiron" and was one of the best students in his class.

"Shorty" carried with him that attraction which comes of an amiable disposition and a spirit of friendliness for everyone. Wherever he was seen, we found also his inseparable companion, a good-natured smile. When we couple with these qualities a sterling character, and the loyalty and sincerity that made him a true friend, we have some idea of the real "Shorty."

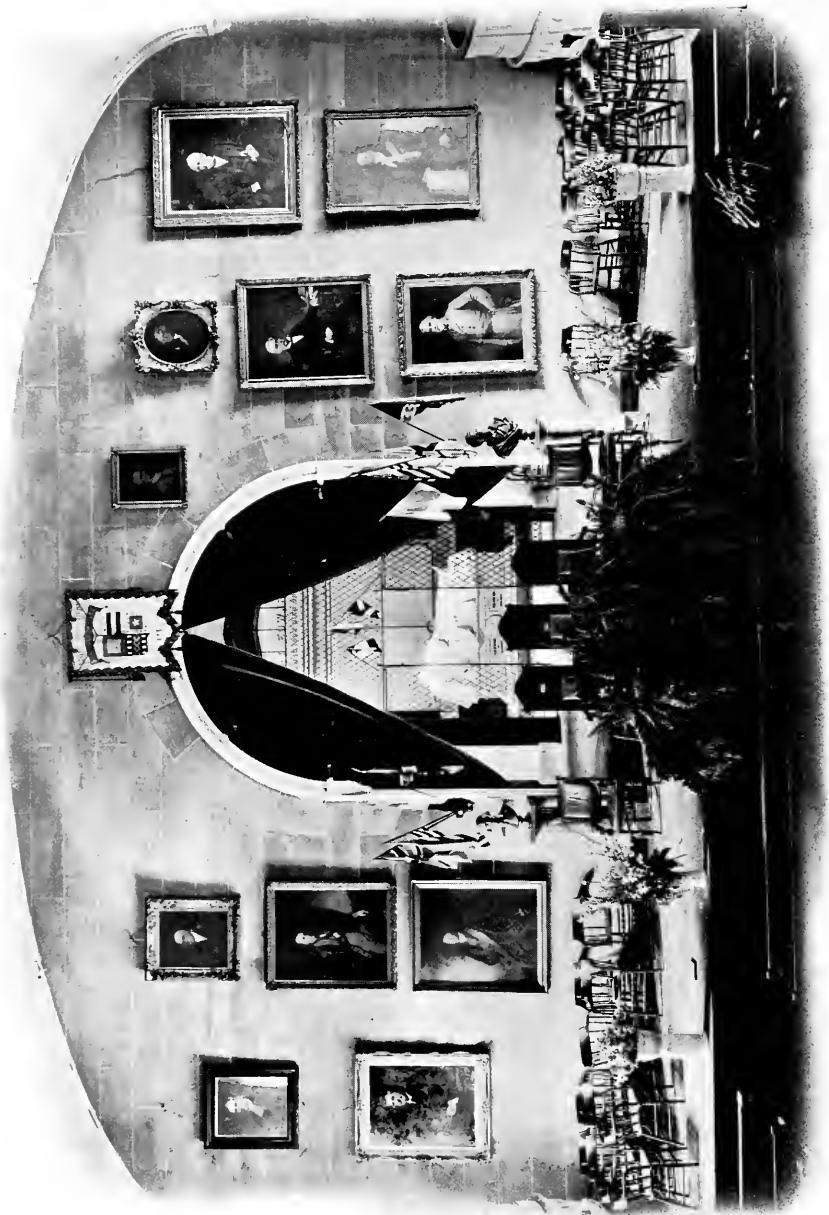

Here is a man who can't be kept down—we know he'll "get there," and we wish him well while he does it.

Raymond, after having prepped at Palmer Academy and College, came to Washington and Lee in 1921 to honor the great and noble Class of '23. Confining himself to no one field of endeavor, Raymond has succeeded in all that he has undertaken, as one can easily see by a glance above. A shark without being a bookworm, Raymond has not only succeeded in capturing all "A's" since entering Washington and Lee but also has succeeded in other activities as well, and is loudly claimed as a friend by all who know him.

Raymond possesses in abundance what most of us lack entirely, and that is, the ability to put his whole soul into whatever he does, and do it well. We predict for him unbounded success in after life in whatever field of endeavor he may enter. His many friends join in wishing him a long and happy career.

Resumé

The question of canceling the Inter-Allied War Debt was discussed in each debate. Washington and Lee upheld the Negative against Davidson College and won a unanimous decision. The Affirmative side was taken against Johns Hopkins, and the Negative against North Carolina. The results of these two debates were not determined in time for publication. Other debates with the University of Cincinnati and George Washington University were held during the latter part of the season, the teams having been picked from the same debaters. Unusual interest was taken in debating this year, and with the aid of Prof. Fulbright the team concluded a very successful season.

Annual Eleven Club Meeting

(Report by "Pathe" Gill, Campus S. andel Board.)

The annual business meeting of the Eleven Club was called for the purpose of discussing elections. This club, composed of the eleven (or twelve) best men in school has as its chief function, the determining of who will be student body officers for the coming year.

President "Toad" Seively opened the meeting with a brief review of the success in the past and a glowing prospectus of its bright future, and called for nominations for President of the Eleven Club as the most important office on the campus in its far-reaching effects. Ward Elliott was nominated, but promptly came to his feet in protest and modestly sought to withdraw, saying he would run for President of the Student Body or President of Finals but was confident that he lacked the ability and personality necessary for President of the Eleven Club. After twelve concerted requests, Ward accepted.

"Jaks" Greiner then moved adjournment, but John Duckery promised to show them a new dance step, so the motion for adjournment failed. Passing on to applications for new members, the name of Freddy Faircloth ("Bub") was presented. Ward Elliott, on behalf of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, asked that "Bub's" name be withdrawn, as he feared election to such an exclusive club might go to "Bub's" head and ruin a fairly good Kappa Sigma.

The principal business of the evening then confronted the club, that of selecting the proper candidates for student body offices. Bill Lynn suggested passing by the job of President of the Student Body and letting Sigma run "Doc" Holbrook, as this would eliminate him from other competition. "Jaks" Greiner then nominated Greiner for Vice-President of the Student Body, but it was decided to give this raspberry to Bob Carr, and "Jaks" was somewhat appeased by being promised the position of President of

DEDICATION

It is the purpose of the REBEL YELL each year to dedicate its publication to the factor in campus life which has achieved the most signal success in whatever line it has been achieved. The most far-reaching improvement in the evolution of the modern student is the radical change in the making due to the organization of the student body officers, showing the young men that they have originated in the fertile soil of the student body. The team has enjoyed a most successful exhibition at the Fancy Dress Ball, as practice events at some of the informal occasions, as well as the season with the required number of championships events at Finals:

GOD SAVE THE KING

(Being extracts from the diary of a college president's trip to England)

FRIDAY—At last, after a strenuous week of leave taking, in mid-Atlantic. The first two days out accompanied by much perturbation and many upheavals. Still somewhat puzzled as to why we are to present a statue of George Washington to England. It is as if V. M. I. should present the Chapel with a handsome engraving of the Main Building after one of their periodic painting outrages. I must prepare my speech in refutation of that fellow Harvey's infamous statement.

Eight Bells and All's Well—Have just sent a wireless dispatch to "Slugg" Stevens ordering the publication of my manifesto abolishing the Pan and White Fray Ribbon Societies. It was indeed a happy thought to communicate this decision from mid ocean, thus affording an illustration of the practical application of the principle of diplomacy.

SATURDAY—Since passing the three-mile limit there has been much moaning of the bar. Saturday night is Saturday night as in the wide Atlantic as well as in narrow Lexington.

MONDAY—Just landed at Southampton. Weather disagreeable. The King was not at the pier to meet me. Must have been detained at the palace or wherever it is he lives.

Later. To London by a most unusual train and was met by a committee. Escorted to the hotel where committee had several drinks. I refusing to join them, of course. Shown to our rooms. Very spacious and no constructed as to be soundproof. This I infer is to assure our comfort in having no unpleasant sounds get in, although

"Reform" Politics a Howling Success

Some of the Candidates Are Still Howling

On the eventful day of May 19th, the Great Experiment was given a complete trial and its results have justified all that was said for it as well as a lot that no one dared to say. Out of the hopeless muddle which attended this change, the following has been gleaned.

The first political battle of the year was waged within the cliques. George Heshburn, leader of his party, showed early signs of having lost the reins and proved unable to still the seething emotions which conflicted within his organization. Several of his clubs turned wobbly and seeing disaster ahead, the ward bosses got together and hatched up a "non-politicking" agreement, which was on the surface all that its name implies, but which has been found to have grievous potentialities for many of those inclined to believe in it.

In the opposition faction, the Phi Gams precipitated a panic when they insisted that "Daddy" Putts must be either President of the Student Body or President of Finals. With such a proposition staring them in the face it is but little wonder that they joined hands with their opponents in promulgating the free-for-all proposition, which was thus adopted, relieving a tense situation for all concerned and leaving the field open to the non-frats, had they but realized it. However, by hook, or possibly by crook, the latter were induced to fall into line, and a score of busy little organizations were formed to take the place of the former parties, Wets and Drys, or whatever they were.

When spring came and the political sap began to course through the veins of the politically inclined, it was found that three men contested for the honor of heading the Student Body, namely, Bill Holt, "Doc" Holbrook, and Jean Ellis. No one seriously expected Jean to win, not even Jean himself, although he had cards printed for the second ballot and had prepared a splendid sob story. Bill Holt was in a quandary—he could not count on a single A. T. O. vote nor had he any backing in the Y. M. C. A. since he had practically disaffiliated

THE CIRCLE—A close corporation for mutual admiration and advertisement, formed to furnish expression for the self adulation which would not be tolerated in the members as individuals. Under the leadership of Willie Tillar, it has cursed and discussed about everything on the campus, but to date we have seen no results of its existence other than the self-satisfied air of the little "Circle."

SIGMA—Said to be a great campus honor. Apparently exists for the purpose of providing annual amusement for the

Athletics, 1922-1923

The year 1922-'23 marks a great turning point in the history of athletics at Washington and Lee University. It is the first year under the full force of the rules of the Southern Intercollegiate Conference. As a result of the resignation of "Bill" Raftery as head coach of athletics, it brings a change in the coaching system for three of the major sports, with "Jimmie" DeHart as head coach. Finally, it marks a year of the completion of plans for greater facilities for athletic training with the extension of the limits of Wilson Field and with the building of a stadium.

The Southern Intercollegiate Conference was organized and established in 1921 with sixteen of the larger Southern collegiate institutions, including Washington and Lee University as charter members.

Its rules were first put into effect with the beginning of 1922, and already this association is recognized for its rigid stand in regard to the betterment of all that is good in intercollegiate athletics. While the rules of eligibility are the strictest of any organization of this kind in the United States, its prestige has been steadily increasing because of the fact that it has been the first of the intercollegiate associations to take the firm stand in regard to eligibility and playing rules that has become such an evident need in college athletics. Its membership now includes twenty of the foremost universities and institutions of college standing in the South. This first year under the conference rules has been a hard one for Washington and Lee in that it has held men off the Varsity teams who otherwise would undoubtedly have played. But the strong effect of these rules will not be so much felt next year, and the higher standards as set by Washington and Lee will reflect much greater credit on the athletics of the University.

Upon the resignation of "Bill" Raftery as head coach last year Washington and Lee obtained the services of "Jimmie" DeHart of the University of Pittsburgh as his successor. The teams turned out by Coach DeHart and his assistants this year have been a credit to Washington and Lee in spite of the fact that the change in coaching systems has come at a very inopportune time, this being the first year under the rule of barring first-year men from Varsity teams.

WORK BEGINS ON "OUR" NEW STADIUM

Of equal interest are the plans for increasing the facilities for athletic training, most noteworthy of which is the enlargement of Wilson Field and the erection of a stadium. By cutting away the bank to the south side of Wilson Field, and filling in the hollow on the west side, space has been made for two additional football fields, two or more baseball diamonds, and ample room for all track and fieldwork, without interfering with the tennis courts on the northern and southeastern sides of the field. Plans for the building of a stadium to accommodate approximately fifteen thousand spectators are now being drawn up, the work to be begun immediately, with the hope of having seating space for five or ten thousand people available next year. The funds for the enlargement of the field and the erection of the stadium are being raised by subscription among the Student Body and Alumni, with the help of the Board of Trustees and the Endowment Fund of the University.

Resumé

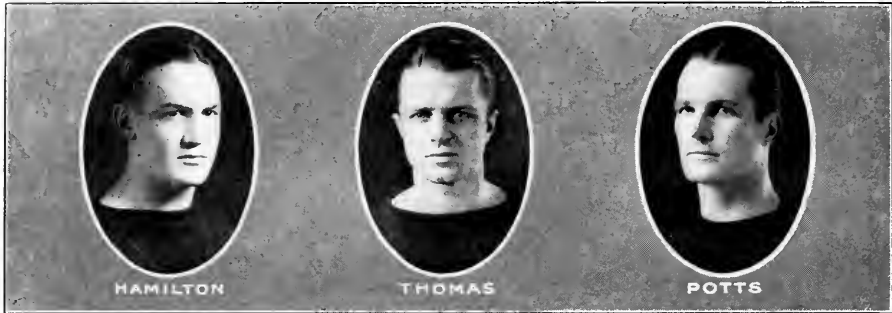

Facing what could be considered one of the most important and critical years in the history of athletics at Washington and Lee, with the change in coaching systems and the first year of football under the Southern Intercollegiate Conference, the 1922 season was opened in September with the initial practice on Wilson Field under Head Coach DeHart. The Varsity squad which reported was, by reason of the ineligibility of the Freshmen, the smallest in recent years, numbering barely forty men, while the Freshman squad numbered sixty or more.

Twelve monogram men from 1921, however, were among the forty, as well as the majority of the Freshmen and Scrubs from the former season. With the small squad it was evident from the first that the lack of substitutes would be the biggest problem of the year, but at the most inopportune time the Varsity squad fell a victim to the most persistent jinx of recent years in the form of a continuous streak of injuries to its men just at the beginning of the most important part of the season. The West Virginia game easily marks the highest point of the 1922 season, but of the eleven men who started that game, the only five who went through the season without injury, or without being forced out of the game for some other reason, were Cameron, Hamilton, Terry, Tilson, and Potts.

The season opened auspiciously, September 30th, with Emory and Henry, the Generals burying the Wasps under an 85-0 score, in a game marked only by perfect interference, drive, and all-around team-work on the part of the home team. The Methodists at times showed form, but were able to register only one first down during the entire game, and that near the end as a result of a long pass. The excellent work of Mattox, Frew, and Hamilton accounted largely for the thirty first downs amassed by the Blue team.

The first important game came the following Saturday with North Carolina State on Wilson Field, the latter being the initial S. I. C. team scheduled. In the first half the Wolfpack got away with a rush and in twelve minutes of play pushed over a touchdown, but from then on matters were mostly in the White and Blue hands, and in spite of the slow, muddy field, the Generals came from behind and defeated State, 14-6. Jimmie Thomas was the hero of the day. He got into the mix-up in the second quarter, and although it was his first big game of intercollegiate football, he was the most important factor in the W. and L. victory with his sensational end-runs and off-tackles gains. Washington and Lee gained in all three times as much ground as did the Tarheels.

Carson and Newman sprang a big surprise the following week, when (with what had been reputed to be a weak team), they put up the hardest fight of the season on Wilson Field and held the Generals to 13-7, playing an unusually good defensive game. Washington and Lee gained during the game more than four times as much ground, but lacked the necessary punch to push over the scores when in a position to do so. In this game the Generals received the first big setback of the season. Jimmie Thomas sustained a broken rib, the first of a long list of injured men that was the chief cause of the Generals' weakness later in the fall.

On October 21st, Washington and Lee journeyed to Charleston to meet West Virginia University in the annual classic of the Mountaineer State. Here the Generals, for the second time during the season, displayed the brand of football for which they are famous. In the second half, with the score standing 12-0 against them, they came back with a fight that swept the conquerors of Pitt off their feet, and with a dazzling aerial attack put across two touchdowns, outfighting and outgaining what West Virginia boasted of as the best gridiron combination ever representing the Mountaineer university. Washington and Lee attained the pinnacle of perfection in this game and played in a way that they did not repeat during the season or had not shown before.

VIRGINIA AT CHARLOTTESVILLE

Their attack was centered mainly in the aerial game, with Mattox doing most of the passing, and Arbogast, Frew, and Tom Bemis snatching them from all angles. Frew furnished the sensation of the game when at the opening of the second half he received a pass and carried the ball to the seven-yard line from where it was carried over for the first touchdown. An intercepted pass by McMillan when in West Virginia territory, followed by a pass to Tom Bemis, scored the second tally. With only a few seconds to play in the final quarter Doug Bemis and Taliaferro stopped Martin the big mountaineer fullback on the one-yard line for the fourth down, the game ending in a tie.

The following Saturday the Lynchburg Hornets fell victim to the Generals' steam roller attack and went down to defeat, 53-0. In this game Washington and Lee received the hardest blow of the season when "Student" Frew, quarterback, was carried from the field after the third play with a broken ankle, to be out for the rest of the season. It was the excellent generalship of Frew as well as his punting and speed which had been one of the biggest factors of the Generals' success, and his loss was a great blow to the morale of the team. McMillan was the greatest ground-gainer over Lynchburg, advancing the ball about 250 yards in all.

On Saturday, November 4th, the Generals met their first defeat at the hands of the University of Virginia, in Charlottesville, when the Orange and Blue got away with a 22-6 victory. The score, however, in no way shows how evenly matched the two teams really were, for until the fourth quarter they stood 6-6. In the last period a punting game went against the Generals and they were forced to play in their own territory the larger part of the time, finally holding Virginia for downs on the White and Blue one-yard line. On the next play, however, the pass from the center was poor, the kick went bad and was caught inside the twenty-yard line. Virginia then easily put over a placement kick. With the game hanging in the balance, the Generals opened up their passing attack down in their own territory, only to have two of the passes intercepted and each result in a touchdown. Washington and Lee's lone tally came in the second quarter on a pass by Mattox to Jimmie Thomas from the twelve-yard line. Cameron and Mattox played well in the backfield while Potts and Arbogast were the shining lights in the line. The loss of Frew, Tom Bemis, and Walter from the line-up, however, told heavily on the Generals. Arnold was the principal factor in the Virginia offensive. In this game Captain Mattox sustained a torn cartilage in the right shoulder that kept him out for the remainder of the season.

With four regulars out of the line-up, the following week-end the Generals met Centre College in Louisville and again were forced to take the small end of a 27-6 score. The game was marked by the brilliant broken field running of Covington, the Colonels' quarterback, and the splendid work of Red Roberts. The ability of Eddie Cameron, White and Blue fullback, to gain through the Centre line almost at will, was the biggest feature of the Generals' game and it was due mostly to his efficient line-bucking that Washington and Lee was able to push across its only score.

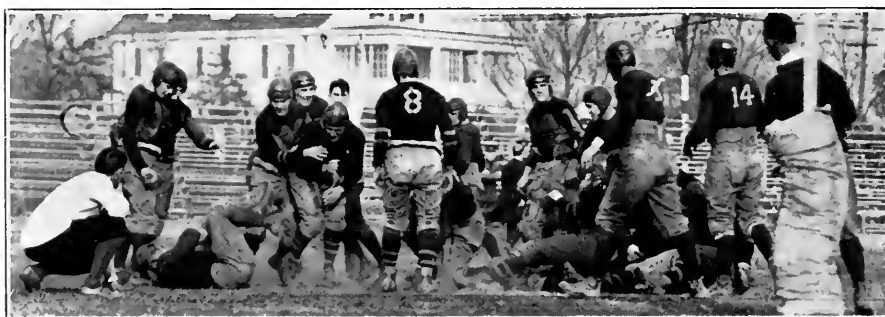

V. P. I. AT LYNCHBURG

In the V. P. I. game in Lynchburg on November 18th the Generals were more handicapped than ever in the matter of injuries and received the worst defeat ever administered them by the Techmen, 41-6. With a powerful array of forwards to help him, Gettle, the Tech fullback, was the hardest man to stop, going through again and again for substantial gains. Quarterback Wallace also played unusually well for V. P. I. The most sensational play of the game, however, came near the end when Dawson threw a pass to McMillan who ran sixty-five yards for the Generals' lone touchdown.

In the Thanksgiving Day game with Johns Hopkins the Generals were able to present their strongest line-up since the West Virginia game, with Tom Bemis, Walter, Wagener, and Arbogast back in good shape. Frew and Mattox, though, were still lacking from the backfield. Pat Hamilton and Jimmie Thomas were the outstanding stars of the game with their long end-runs and consistent off-tackle plays. The victory on Homewood Field brought the season to a fitting end, the 14-0 score showing only in a small way the manner in which the Generals tore through the Blue and Black eleven. It may be better judged by the fact that Washington and Lee amassed twenty-three first downs in the game to four for Hopkins.

considering the strong showing which the Generals made against teams which were in their own immediate section, the record for this year is considered a good one.

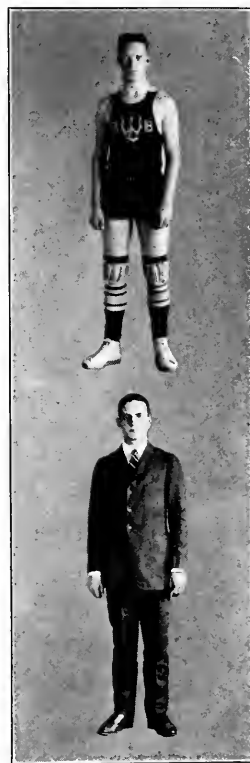

The team was slow in getting started and suffered a bad slump at the height of the season when they took the Northern trip. Yet at times the Generals displayed form that was as brilliant as that of any other quintets wearing the White and Blue in many years.

Taking on the Washington College team in the first game of the season in an affair which was expected to be an easy win, Washington and Lee encountered instead one of the fastest teams ever playing on the local floor and one which had already played several games and was going in mid-season form. The result was a 27-18 defeat. The team picked up, however, after that and vanquished Lynchburg College and Roanoke College easily, 56-23 and 41-28.

Gathering speed every day the Generals met V. P. I. in the first important game of the season on January 27th. The team was working in perfect form that night, the defense impenetrable, and the passing and shooting consistent. The brand of ball displayed was of the kind that would have stopped any of the Generals' later opponents as it stopped the fast Tech quint in a most thorough manner, holding them to a scant 7 points while at the same time amassing a total of 31 to their own credit.

Four days later the Generals met their second reverse of the season at the hands of North Carolina University, Southern Champions of 1922. The final score was 24-21. The game was unusually fast throughout, especially during the second half when

From the standpoint of games won and lost, the record of the Washington and Lee basketball team for 1923 is not an imposing one, but when the strength of their opponents is taken into consideration, compared with that of the schedules undertaken by the W. and L. court teams in former years, and also con-at 16 all, both teams raced several minutes without scoring. In the first of the two games with the University of Virginia, played on the local floor, the White and Blue team outclassed their old rivals and won 29-19. While the entire team worked well, Thomas and Hines showed exceptional form.

Then came the disastrous Northern invasion. Meeting West Virginia in Huntington, February 3d, the Blue team lost again to the Mountaineers in a fast and rough game, the score being 27-20. Games with W. and J., Carnegie Tech, and Pitt, followed the first three days of the following week, all going against the Generals. The Carnegie Tech game ended in a race for scoring honors, the Tartars emerging with a 40-36 edge on the visitors.

Returning home the Generals met South Carolina the following Tuesday and defeated them in a slow and uninteresting game, 26-19, W. and L. showing poor form except at times when the Gamecocks threatened to grab the lead. Some improvement was shown in the George Washington University game the next night, the White and Blue having no trouble in walking away with a 30-16 decision.

Showing much improvement over their last meeting, the Virginia Tech five next stacked up against the Generals for the second encounter, playing this time in Blacksburg, and in a fast and desperately-fought contest the White and Blue came out with a 29-28 victory. Upon taking to the road the University of Virginia five was again encountered, this time in Charlottesville where the Orange and Blue evened matters up by taking a 36-17 fall out of the Generals, the latter displaying poor form throughout, the shooting especially being weak.

In the last game of the season Washington and Lee journeyed to Washington to tackle the crack Catholic University quint in the latter's home territory, the Washington team having just conquered the Navy five and with only one defeat against them. The Washington and Lee quintet was working well, however, better than at any time since the early part of the season, and for three-fourths of the game the advantage seesawed back and forth from one side to the other. Too loose floorwork, however, spelled defeat when Lake and Cameron were forced out because of personal fouls just at the time when the score stood 18-18. With six minutes to play, the Catholic U. crew got to work and added ten more points to their total.

Resumé

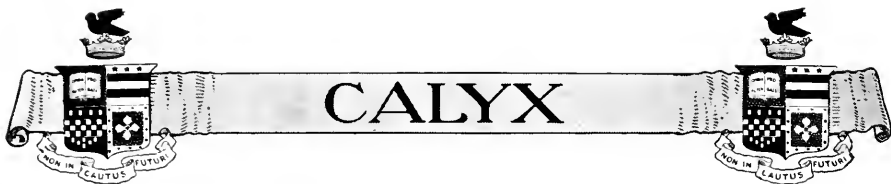

Not only was the 1922 season successful from the point of view of games won, but the team, as a whole, was one of the hardest-hitting and smoothest-working aggregations of the last ten years. Throughout the season the record of the Generals was marked by last-minute comebacks or games in which they overcame big leads, again and again turning what seemed to be defeats into victories. The loyal way in which the Student Body backed the team can be said to have contributed in no small measure to its success.

The schedule as arranged included twenty-one games, among which were most of the Generals' biggest rivals—V. P. I., Virginia, Georgia Tech, and West Virginia. Starting the season the last day of March the Generals went through their schedule in fine style, showing great offensive ability.

Washington and Lee got away strong in the opening game with an 8-0 victory over Roanoke College, the fracas marked only by the consistent slugging of the home team and the good work of the White and Blue moundsmen. South Carolina presented a much stronger team than the Maroons, and surprised W. and L., accumulating a seven-run lead early in the game and holding it in spite of the work of the Generals who put across five counters. After this setback the nine opened up, and in whirlwind style walked over the best that V. P. I., University of Pittsburgh, and Virginia were able to offer, taking the Gobblers into camp 11-3; and, Pitt 10-2. The games with Virginia were the first in years between the two teams, and one was played on the home field of each university. In the first, which was played on Wilson Field, the Orange and Blue by reason of several hits and a number of errors had amassed a total of seven runs at the end of the second inning, to a big zero for the White and Blue. But the latter in an orgy of slugging caught up with and passed the Virginia team while at the same time preventing them from further scoring, winding up with a 10-7 win. The second game was played on Lambeth Field a few days later and ran into a thirteen-inning pitchers' battle between Lindberg and Harrison, Lindberg's double in the thirteenth finally putting it on ice.

University of North Carolina undoubtedly presented the strongest opposition of the season, but in the first game, with the score standing 8-0 against them in the eighth inning, the Generals began touching the Tarheel slabmen, and with the help of a number of miscues on the part of Carolina, snowed the visitors under an avalanche of runs, the dust finally clearing away over a 9-8 victory for W. and L. Elated by their win, however, they dropped the other contest to the Tarheels, 6-3. N. C. State was the next victim and lost, 6-5. In meeting Georgia Tech the Generals took on a team which the year before had been a stumbling block; but with their strengthened line-up the Blue team took the first game, 6-5. They dropped the second, however, 4-3.

The West Virginia game was one of the closest of the season and marked the first victory of the Generals over the Mountaineers in any sport since resuming athletic relations in 1920. The battle ran into twelve innings, the visitors lone tally coming from a circuit clout by Homer Martin. Finally, in the twelfth, Monk Mattox pounded out a double, made third on Lindberg's sacrifice, and came home on a well-executed squeeze play, Switzer laying down a perfect bunt.

"THE THING SPEAKS FOR ITSELF"

Randolph-Macon succumbed, 16-0, in the final game before the rather disastrous southern invasion. Losses to Trinity, 3-2; N. C. State, 10-0; and North Carolina University, 9-1; were interrupted only by an 8-4 victory over Elon. In the last two games of the season the Generals met Georgia Tech again, this time in Atlanta. In the first, Captain Bill McCallum pitched one of the most brilliant successes of his career, letting the home team down with five scattered bingles and two runs, while his own team got to the Tech's renowned "Sunshine" Thompson for seven hits and three tallies. Charlie Terry was largely responsible for the win with his terrific double into the bleachers in the third, scoring two runs. In the second game, however, with Bill McCallum forced to pitch again, Tech put across three runs, holding the visitors scoreless.

Twelve victories and seven defeats, four of the latter coming on the southern jaunt, was the record hung up for the season. This without doubt, gave them the strongest claim to the State Championship for, considering the caliber of the teams which appeared on Wilson Field and in hostile territory, the team and its record deserve only the highest praise.

J. R. THOMAS
Captain-elect

"Jim" Thomas was no doubt the most consistently good man on the track team. Though not quite fast enough to win the South Atlantic, he could always be depended on to put in a strong bid for first place in the 100 and the 220 against the best of them. Coming to Washington and Lee when the Generals had several very fast sprinters he made his monogram his Freshman year and has been running the 100 and the 220 in every meet for the last three years. His value to the track team as a whole, as well as his outstanding ability individually, certainly made him worthy of his selection for the captaincy of the 1922 team. By making his letter in the Fall of 1922, as well as having made the Varsity football and basketball teams, he has shown himself to be one of the best all-around athletes in the University inspite of his somewhat small stature.

W. A. WILLIAMS, JR.

Hailing from McCallie School, "Abe" ran the quarter first for W. and L. at the time when "Birdie" Robbins, probably the fastest all-around runner ever representing Washington and Lee, was at his best. Though running Robbins a close race, and almost equaling his record for the 440-yard run, he was unable to beat him and did not make his monogram his first year but earned it in both 1921 and 1922. He also tied the indoor record for the quarter during the Winter season of 1922. His loss to the squad will be seriously felt, for "Abe" was easily the strongest man in the University in his event, could push the best quarter-milers in the South Atlantic to the limit, and could be depended on to romp away from the majority of them.

W. L. WARD, JR.

Ward was undoubtedly the star of the Generals' 1922 track team in that he entered in six events and could be depended on to make a good showing in all of them. As a high jumper, broad jumper, and pole vaulter he was especially good, taking places in the South Atlantic meet in each of these events. In the V. P. I. meet he came out as high-point man, placing in every event that he entered, winning the high jump and placing in the pole vault, broad jump, shot put, javelin, and discus. During the single season that he was here he raised the indoor records for the standing high jump and tied with Norman in raising the running high jump (indoor) record. He smashed the outdoor high jump record by several inches, increasing it to 6 feet 1 inch and extended the broad jump mark to 22 feet 5 inches. His failure to return to the University at the first of this year was a big loss to the track squad of 1922.

"JIMMIE" WINNING THE HALF IN THE SOUTH ATLANTICS

CALYX

W. C. SMITH

"Cliff" came here in 1920 without any previous track experience, made the cross-country team his Freshman year, and has since been "burning 'em up" in all of the distance events. He earned his monogram as a member of the Varsity track team in the Spring of his first year, running the two-mile. In 1922 he was shifted to the mile, and took first in both the Maryland and Richmond meets. Not only was he especially good in the mile but he has shown himself to be one of the best distance men ever representing Washington and Lee by running several times in both the mile and two-mile events and placing in both. He took first in both in the University of Richmond meet. As captain of the Cross-country team he lowered the local record for the course by twenty-seven seconds during the season last Fall.

R. A. RHODES

Handicapped by having sustained a broken hip just prior to entering W. and L., Ralph had not fully recovered by the time for the Spring track season of his first year. Last season, however, he made a name for himself as a good all-around man and a hurdler of no mean ability. Besides being the Generals' best bet in the low hurdles he was an entrant in the shot-put, the 100-yard dash, and the broad jump. He ran his best race in the hurdles when he beat out Schenck of the crack Virginia team in Charlottesville. With three more years in which to develop he should make his mark as one of the best men in his class and as one of the mainstays of the White and Blue team.

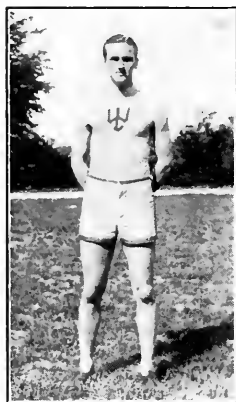

G. B. SIMMONS

Simmons is another first-year man on the Washington and Lee team who has made a remarkable record for his short collegiate career. Though the running of the high hurdles is his chief event he did well in the annual heavy gym meet by establishing a new record for the standing broad jump—10 feet 1 inch. In outdoor track he showed himself to be a worthy successor to Captain Blair Price of the 1921 team in the high hurdles. He ran probably his best race against Schenck of Virginia when he took first in that meet. With two or three more years to develop in, Simmons should turn out to be one of the Generals' most brilliant performers.

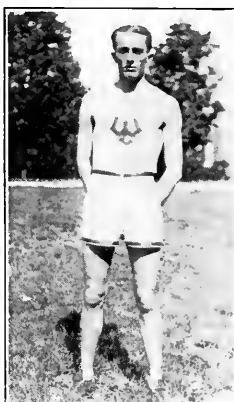

SIMMONS TAKING THE HIGH HURDLES AT VIRGINIA

Two Hundred Nine

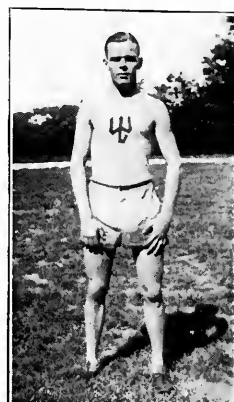

JOHN LEWIS

Coming here in 1921 with an enviable record from his high school in Jacksonville, Florida, Lewis bids fair to become a star in track, as another all-around man, entering the shot-put, broad jump, and discus. His strongest event is the discus, and it was in this that he made his letter last year. However, he also showed up well in the broad jump and shot-put. He is heavy and powerfully built and should develop in a few years into an unusually good weight man. He took first in the discus in both the Richmond and Maryland meets, beating Beers, Maryland's star performer, in the meet at College Park. He placed in both the broad jump and shot-put in several other meets.

P. A. NORMAN

Norman is another first-year man on the Washington and Lee track team who showed excellent promise in the 1922 season. He tied with Ward in breaking the indoor high-jump record during the winter as well as making a good record in the Spring season. Though handicapped at the start of the season by ineligibility, Norman made up this deficiency and got into the meets with Richmond, V. P. I., and the South Atlantic. His strongest event was the pole vault, although, he did well in other field events—the high jump and the discus throw. He again tied with Ward in smashing the pole-vault record and raising it to 11 feet 6½ inches.

J. E. HUMPHREYS

"Jimmie" entered Washington and Lee with an enviable record from Tome School, and in the Spring track season showed that his record in prep school was far from being an empty one, for he proved to be one of the star performers in the Generals' aggregation. His particular race was the 880-yard run. In addition to defeating the much-touted Newman of V. P. I. in the race with the Blacksburg institution, "Jimmie" placed in the South Atlantic. He showed a clear superiority over the best that Richmond and Maryland had to offer in the half as well. It is with regret that the Generals face the 1923 season without him on the squad, for it will be a hard job replacing him.

C. L. Howard

Much of the success of the Generals 1922 Cross-Country team may be attributed to the stellar performance of C. L. Howard, winner of two of the three meets in which W. and L. was entered. Establishing a record of thirty-two minutes one and eight-tenths seconds he won the Individual Championship at the South Atlantic meet, and again demonstrated his prowess by taking first honors in the Evening Dispatch meet at Richmond several weeks later. In addition to his Cross-Country honors he is holder of the Washington and Lee indoor mile record, having reduced the time of the former record of five minutes, three and three-fifths seconds to four minutes, fifty-seven and one-fifth seconds. In the Johns Hopkins indoor meet he was unable to place in the mile run, owing to a stringent handicap, though none except those who were given a handicap finished ahead of him.

Resumé

Three victories out of three meets in which they were entered, two of them for the possession of cups, sums up the achievements of the 1922 Cross-Country team. The team, composed of Captain Smith, Howard, Pass, Swope, Heiskell, Hawkins, and Guerrant, is conceded to be one of the best that has ever represented Washington and Lee in the distance-running.

Running during the Lynchburg College game the Generals easily defeated the V. P. I. harriers on October 28th. First honors in this race were taken by Captain Smith.

Competing with teams from Virginia, V. P. I., and Johns Hopkins, at Blacksburg on November 25th, the harriers won the South Atlantic Championship for the second consecutive time.

The winning of this meet entitles Washington and Lee to the permanent possession of the Mulligan cup, having fulfilled the requirement that it be won five times.

Again the W. and L. team demonstrated its superiority when, several weeks later, first place was taken in the meet conducted by the Evening Dispatch in Richmond. The team literally "mopped up" here, coming home with the cup and six of the eight medals awarded. Teams from Virginia, Richmond University, and Elon College were entered in this contest.

Prospectus

The 1923 season should be one of the most marked in the history of tennis at Washington and Lee. There is an abundance of material in school with which to form a winning team and the proposed schedule will give them ample opportunity to show their ability. Plans call for entering the Spring tournament at White Sulphur Springs and the Intercollegiate tournaments at Richmond and Philadelphia. A trip through the South is also contemplated, besides meets with Virginia and V. P. I. at home.

The gym team played an important role in the Annual Gymnasium Exhibition in the Doremus Gymnasium on March 12th. Formation of Pyramids, a Novelty Love Dance, and the Highland Fling Dance, together with several exhibitions of apparatus work, constituted their part of the program. Biddle and Felsenthal, as clowns, proved to be the outstanding stars of the entertainment, both as acrobats and comedians.

Washington Lee

Assets and Ideals

Its Unshared Possessions

By DR. HENRY LOUIS SMITH

Among the two hundred colleges and universities of the South, Washington and Lee occupies a position entirely its own. Of the unshared possessions which thus set it apart, three are especially worthy of mention.

1. Its unique location and ennobling associations.

The Institution, as is well known, was founded by a gift of $50,000 from George Washington, and was by him formally authorized to bear his name. It was his chosen institution, and, as Washington College, trained a long succession of men whose eminent services to Virginia and the nation bore witness to the abiding inspiration of his character and example.

In the wreck which followed the Civil War, the illustrious leader of the Southern Armies, seeking where and how he could best serve his devastated and impoverished land, rejected offers of wealth and ease for his services in other directions and chose Washington's college as the most fruitful opportunity for his own investment. Having no money, he gave himself to the institution. With un murmuring faith and resignation, with unremitting diligence and keenest interest, with pedagogic wisdom and magnetic leadership, he re-founded and re-built Washington College, gathered friends, students, buildings, and endowments on Washington's foundation, and then, worn out by his incessant labors, bequeathed to it his sacred dust and his incomparable name.

Here, too, in the little town of Lexington, "Stonewall" Jackson lived and labored, and here his ashes rest, not far from those of his great commander.

From the cupola of the old Washington Building the statue of the "Father of his Country" looks down on the Campus of the University which he endowed, not only with his money but with his immortal name; and in the chapel just opposite is the mausoleum which holds the sacred dust of Lee and the marvelous recumbent statue which so impressively embodies in marble the simple majesty of his character.

Truly "the heart of the South beats at Lexington!" Washington, Lee, Jackson! It is no wonder that the New York Evening Post, in an able editorial, marvels at the remarkable prominence of the Washington and Lee Alumnae in the service of the nation; for the young man whose character takes shape amid such influences and associations must, from the very air he breathes, grow toward the stature of greatness and learn the nobility of service.

2. Thesecondunsharedpossession of the University is its unique independence.

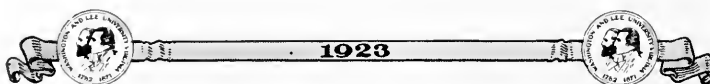

Washington and Lee University is and has always been deeply and evangelically Christian in its great presidents, its past and present teaching force, its Board of Trustees, and its ideals and traditions. It is the hope and fixed purpose of those who direct its affairs that it shall more and more be saturated with the Christian spirit and inspired by the Christian ideal. Yet its governing board is self-perpetuating and independent, its professors and students represent all denominations, and its teaching is unfettered by the necessity of conforming to a single view of truth, or to the limits of a specified creed.

Institutions supported by the State, however valuable in service or varied in activities, are, like those owned and controlled by a church, never entirely free. Every taxpayer in the State is a part owner and feels that he has a right to criticize and direct Campus discipline. Teaching on industrial, economic and racial questions must have regard to the dominant political party. Legislatures must be placated in order to secure large annual appropriations. Party leaders must not be offended. The election of the professors must often be decided on other grounds than fitness and efficiency, and at times the institution may become a mere football in the game of party politics.

In its freedom, therefore, to set its own academic ideals, enforce its own standards, select its professors on merit alone, teach what seems to its professors the whole truth on every subject, and uphold on its Campus high standards of scholarship and conduct by the untrammelled rejection and elimination of the unprepared and the unworthy, Washington and Lee enjoys a unique and priceless privilege.

3. It is equally unique in its unrestricted opportunity. Although located in Virginia, its position is aptly expressed by the athletic term "All-Southern". It is the one Southern institution which appeals to and is patronized by the whole South, drawing two thirds of its students from beyond the borders of the Old Dominion.

Yet even this fact only half states its opportunity for service. As both Washington and Lee have outgrown all sectionalism and are now national heroes, so their institution is appealing more and more to the whole nation and drawing enthusiastic students from every part of the North and West. Although rooted in the most historic section of Old Dominion, it is not a Virginia University. Although a typically Southern institution, it has a national patronage and makes a national appeal. Although a Christian institution in a peculiarly religious environment, it is non-denominational and draws its students from all Christian homes without regard to denominational lines.

Yet with this illimitable field of patronage, the present equipment and resources of Washington and Lee compel it to admit only a limited number of students and each year, as soon as its fixed limit is reached, all applicants are rejected.

Without competing, therefore, with State, denominational, or local institutions, or seriously diminishing their attendance, Washington and Lee can fill her halls with picked men from every section and bring together on her Campus a student body of a new type.

This exceptional opportunity, possessed by no other Southern institution, imposes a corresponding obligation, outlines a policy, and constitutes a call to a definite service for the South and the nation. This policy is fourfold: First, to subordinate numbers to quality; to form and enforce, with a courage born of freedom, its own ideals and standards of scholarship, character, and student life; second, to train for leadership, emphasizing the moral and inspirational, and striving to add height and power to mere knowledge; third, to reject for their own sake those who are morally or intellectually unprepared for the difficulty of college studies or the freedom of college life, with a persistence only equaled by its sympathy, those whose habits and character are injurious to their fellow-students; and, fourth, to seek throughout this wide area of patronage and influence those high-school graduates whose character and ability have already marked them for future influence and service, and made them quick to feel the inspiration of great names and ennobling associations.

These are the three inestimable possessions which set Washington and Lee apart, as it were, outside of the whirlpool of politics and commercialism, and call it to a sphere and service of its own. The first is a noble and ennobling heritage from a historic past, the second broadens its horizon and unfetters its energies in the present, and the third is both an opportunity and an inspiration for the service of the future.

Its Controlling Motive and Policy

Believing that the end of all education is the formation of character, and that the intellect cannot be isolated or separately trained, Washington and Lee accepts and avows the following facts and principles:

Three Hundred Twenty-three

1. That the educational emphasis has shifted from mere knowledge and abstract "scholarship" to the pressing problems of civics, industry, education, sociology, and government in the ferment of the 20th century.

2. That in our democratic civilization, social-mindedness, the acceptance of civic responsibility, the art and practice of team-work and self-government, the habit of the square deal, and habitual courtesy and honor are more essentially important than either learning or intellectual ability.

3. That education without character is a curse to the individual and through him to the State.

4. That the educative influence for good or evil of the Campus and its whirlwind of "activities" is far more important in character-building than the influence of the Faculty and the formal instruction of the classroom and laboratory.

5. That it is, therefore, the official duty of the Faculty and of its members to co-operate and sympathize with each student and with all legitimate student enterprises; to encourage in every possible way student responsibility and student self-government, and to so direct and supervise all student organizations, recreations, and activities as to make them helpful, educative, and developmental.

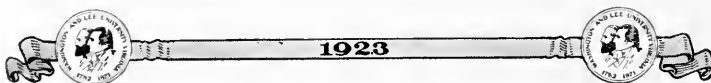

6. That so-called Faculty "discipline" is never merely punitive or legal, but always remedial and preventive, guarding against moral infection in the spirit and by the methods of modern sanitation in the realm of disease.

7. That drinking, gambling, sensuality, incorrigible indolence, etc., are infectious moral diseases destroying character and undermining all educative efforts.

8. That matriculation and membership in a college community such as W. and L. is not a legal, constitutional, or political right, but a privilege to be conferred only upon those who in the opinion of the Faculty are prepared in age, maturity, intellectual training, and moral character to use such privileges with profit to themselves and without injury to others.

9. That the health, care, control, and training of the body is of equal importance in the habit-forming period of youth with the training of the intellect, and should be regarded, not as outside of or opposed to college work, but as a definite and important part of it.

10. That the chief and controlling aim of the four-year undergraduate college period should not be abstract "book-learning," intellectual discipline, or mere "scholarship" alone, but ideal, highly-trained Citizenship in the 20th century, to which all education of heart, hands, and brain is but a means to the greater and more complex end.

ACT ONE

Scene One

The colonnade promenade in front of Doremus Gymnasium.

The curtain rises with A Student standing upon the promenade, supporting one of the pillars with his arms.

A STUDENT: "One moon, two moons, three moons,
Hic. They whirl, they flee me past,
As the next one goeth by I'll reach out
And a moon I'll grasp."

(He reaches out and falls from the promenade with a loud thud which may be produced off stage by hitting a tin roof with a tack hammer.)

Enter A Prof

A PROF: "Who lieth there, sheltered from the moon's piercing rays by yon protecting shadow?"

Enter Another Student

ANOTHER STUDENT: "Yer most worshipful Honor,
Yon fallen one is a stranger.
He cometh from a neighboring institution
And is a booze and box-fighter of no mean degree.
And is no liege of Lefty Louie."

A PROF: (Striding to the fallen one's side with long, deliberate strides, and peering into his face with an extreme intentness.)

"Thou liest a dastardly lie.
This man is no box-fighter from a neighboring institution
For, verily, he art A Student who sleepeth in my classes."

The curtain falls slowly, while the Phi Kap fraternity marches in with measured tread to the strains of Good-bye, Forever, and carry off A Student who has passed out.

"My God! Been in a fight, Oscar, or down at the Sigma Nu House?"
 "Both."

Smash

When the long Winter evenings come 'round and it is too dark and too cold to play out of doors, the necessity for some genteel indoor pastime is felt very keenly in the various fraternity houses. With this idea in view we have set about to devise means of innocent sport and enjoyment that all the young men will appreciate.

First, we will take up the game of Smash. This game has been played at the Sigma Nu house and at other houses on the Campus with great success. It is an extremely interesting sport, and can easily be mastered by anyone in an evening.

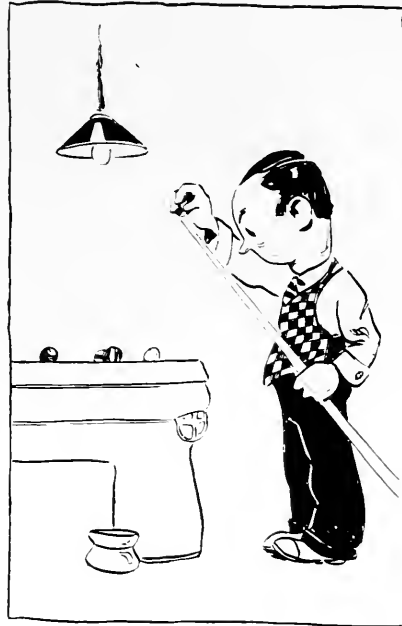

All that is necessary for the playing of the game is an ordinary fraternity house—or any other house with windows and a fair amount of furniture will do, though it is not considered good form to play the game in a Faculty member's domicile—about two gallons of corn whiskey which can be procured through most any member of the Faculty or through the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and a bunch of boys with a taste for liquor. The game is opened by one of the young men, who has previously been designated as "It," usually the possessor of the liquor is nominated in that capacity. He says, "Everybody come up to my room and we'll all catch a little drink." All the other participants in the game cry, "Yea, let's all catch a little drink." All now proceed to the "It's" room where the "It" produces a half-gallon Mason jar from his trunk. A goat is now dispatched to the bathroom for a glass of water. The "It" shall proceed to pour into an ordinary table tumbler enough of the Mason jar's contents to half fill that receptacle. Now the "It" shall say, either to the young man upon his immediate left, or the young man upon his immediate right, "You're first, old man." The young man so designated shall answer, "That's too much for me, I can't handle that much," at the same time reaching for the glass and draining it at a swallow. The "It" now says, "Good stuff?," and the player, who has just drained the glass, answers, "Good stuff. Don't taste at all like corn." The play continues in a similar manner with each player until the entire circle has been circumvented three, four, or five times, depending entirely on whether the play is taking place at the Sigma Nu, A T O, Phi Psi, or Beta house. If the game is being played at the K A house it is customary for the "It" to say to each player taking a drink, "Now, for God's sake, don't get too damn' drunk and raise hell. Remember, we are all on pledge."

The play is now removed from the "It's" room to the living room of the house, along with the players and the liquor. Then, after the players sing The Swing three times, and Our College Friendships four times, they all take a couple more drinks and the game begins in earnest. The real object of the game is to break as much of everything as is possible, except the jar containing the liquor which is to be broken only in case the police or the revenue officers decide to raid the house. Speaking of policemen, reminds me of a little etiquette connected with the game of Smash that is often overlooked by some of our too strenuous players. When a policeman calls at the house, even though he may be quite below your own social station, it is considered very poor form to say to him, "Go to hell, you big stiff! You can't come in here."

It is usually the custom to allow the young man, previously designated as "It," to formally open the sport by knocking over the victrola. This gives him five points. Now, as to the scoring of the game. Every time a man succeeds in kicking out a window with his foot, he shall cry in a loud voice, "Smash, there she goes," and shall score two points. If he succeeds in breaking the window with his fist, he shall shout, "Hot damn," and score three points. In a similar manner all chairs shall count four points; all victrolas, five points; and all pianos and tables, ten points. Electric light globes, considered a minor matter, are valued at but one point. The man with the highest number of points at the finish of the evening's sport is designated "Winner," and has the privilege of going up to see the President of the University in the morning.

The game of Smash is also admirably suited to team play, and fraternity rivalry could be brought to high pitch by interfraternity participation in the sport. For instance, say that a match has been arranged between the A T O's and the Phi Kap's. On the evening set apart for the meeting of the two teams the Phi Kap's would repair to the A T O house and the A T O's would repair to the Phi Kap house where the play would proceed in the usual manner. The next day both fraternities would levy a special assessment upon their members to repair both houses.

A Romance

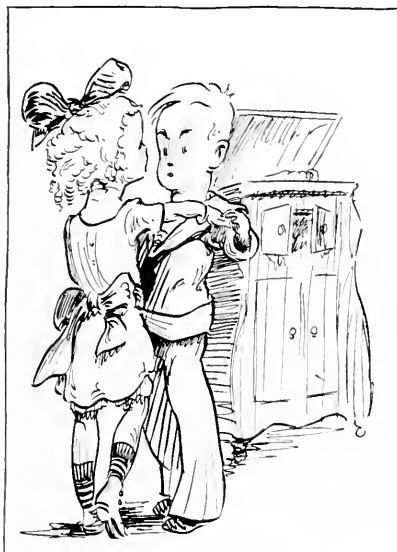

The policeman slowly walked his beat,
When in the gutter low he spied
A youth, who though the air was chill,
Had no coat to cover his freezing hide.

"What ho?" The ossifer cried,
"How camest thou to this state?
Thy form uncovered to wintry winds,
No warming hat upon thy pate.

Hast thou been held up and robbed
By some fell rogues of hardened heart?
Or hast thou gambled 'way thy dough?
How camest thou with thy coat to part?"

"Oh, ossifer, brave ossifer!
My watch, my jack is gone,
My pocket flask, my fritney pin;
My overcoat's in pawn.

I've been on a date with a Prom Girl,"
The sad-eyed youth replied.
"You're lucky, lad," the ossifer said,
"To have got off with your hide."

Turned Loose On Main Street

By Old Turner Loose Himself

A Dangerous Gift

During my boyhood I once saw a safe, dependable, trusting bulldog who enjoyed and valued his freedom caught up and chained to his kennel. He was fed an allotted portion at specific hours of the day and allowed to run free for only short times and then was ceaselessly watched by his well-intentioned caretaker. One day, when the eyes of his master were averted, he broke his shackles and fled precipitately down the street, biting innocent pedestrians and leaving huddled bunches of fear-maddened people in his wake. So thoughtless was this canine of the rights of others that his newly-acquired freedom was soon put to a tragic end by a bullet from the gun of the local constable. "Restraint is like strychnine. When used moderately and with wisdom it is a harmless stimulant. When administered in excessive doses, a violent poison."

Our Suicidal Folly

Every year, so 'tis said, a hundred thousand young men, the flower of American youth, are turned loose on the swarming main street of college life. They come joyously from the military-governed preparatory schools of our great country, happy in the thought that here they may enjoy the freedom which has been so dearly earned in the process of preparation. They believe, innocently enough, that the days of compulsion are over and that here the inherent wealth of personality and individuality will be allowed to bloom unrestrained.

But alas, their sad mistake becomes evident with the passing of time. Modern-day education seemingly disregards that theory of what we so fondly call "the good old days," to wit, that when a man had reached the mature age which renders him eligible for entrance to college he is a man in the strict meaning of the word and should be allowed to work out his own fate as such.

A Comparison

Suppose, for instance, we take an example from that greatest of all teachers—nature—and observe a vine which is allowed to grow free. It spreads itself over everything in a riot of joy in its younger days, but settles later on into a fixed routine of growth, and serves its purpose in a stately, diligent, and faithful manner. But if you would stunt the growth and spoil the beauty of this plant, cut the branches from it in an effort to force it to conform in size to your will or remove it to a hothouse where it may be incessantly watched and tampered with, watch it die.

To the College Aspirant

However, if you would enter college you must reconcile yourself to the methods employed there, and failure to recognize them will result only in having the colossal advantage of a college education refused you.

Here, then, are a few simple questions which you would do well to ask yourself. If you can conscientiously answer them, you are eligible, regardless of your "Carnegie units."

("Restraint is like strychnine. When used moderately and with wisdom it is a harmless stimulant. When used in excessive portions, a violent poison.")

The Entrance Exam

1. Are you man enough to submit to petty restrictions which would humiliate a child, and retain your individuality?
2. Are you man enough to bow your head and acquiesce when threatened with expulsion if you do not forewear some of the few innocent privileges remaining to you?
3. Are you man enough to know what you want to do with your money, and spend it as you see fit, regardless of advice from others?

This is a short but searching entrance examination. If you cannot stand it, remember that for the self-asserting, strong-willed, and frugal, the college graveyard is yawning and never full. If you can, rejoice that for the wise there are only four years of such, and what man does not realize the value of higher learning to the extent that he will take his punishment with a grin.

Bought a suit of combination underwear
To keep out the awful damp, cold air.
Wore it for six months, and, without exaggeration,
When I went to take it off, I'd lost the combination.

JOY—"Have you a date for Junior Prom?"
GLOOM—"No. I'm taking my roommate's sister."

A little song entitled:

A PANE IN THE WINDOW IS WORTH TWO IN THE HEAD

(Dedicated to Carl Gill, with the usual apologies to everybody except Carl)

A fat man cannot fight,
A fat man cannot run,
A fat man cannot dance,
The poor old son-of-a-gun.
But, in the Wintertime,
When the nights are cold and dreary,
And the North wind's blowin'
And the snow is snowin',
Why, then, believe you me, my dearie,
No skinny men need to call,
I want no cold, thin men at all,
But I want a nice warm fat man near me.

Two heads are better than one. Consider the barrel. (So sayeth Claude Shelton and Roger Jones.)

HELLO, WARM!

Oh, Freddie boy, I love you, dear,
The curl of hair behind your ear,
I love your line; but, that's all I can;
I don't want you, Freddy. I want a man.

Men may come and men may go, but Baldy will be here forever.

"I hear that you have a new car, "Red," have you gone very far in it?"

"Yes, with all the girls but Margaret."

If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again

(A song in the trio)

Cy: I'm up for my degree, boys,

Cho: We're up for our degree.

Baldy: I'm up for my degree, boys,

Cho: We're up for our degree.

Skeet: I'm up for my degree, boys,

Cho: We're up for our degree,

Will we fail again, boys?

We'll just wait and see.

And this is not a jesting matter,

But, a plain, outspoken fact

If we should happen to fail again.

We'll know just how to act.

Bed-Time Stories

"Come, children," said Aunt Polly, "and Aunt Polly will tell you all a nice story before it is bed-time."

"Oh, goody, goody!" cried all the little children, for they dearly loved Aunt Polly's bed-time stories, especially the one about the traveling salesman and the chamber-maid.

"Tell us the one that Al Jolson tells about the man who says to the other man, 'You ought to pull your shades at night, I saw you and your wife last night,'" cried little Jimmy.

"Now, children, you must have patience," said Aunt Polly with a smile, for she loved the children as much as she loved her beer, and Aunt Polly dearly loved her beer. "If you are all good little boys and girls while I tell this story, I will give you all something before you go to bed. Guess what it can be."

"A glass of beer," said little Mary.

"I'll bet it is gin," said Jimmy.

"No, children, you are all wrong," said Aunt Polly, "it is a nice ginger-ale highball. And now you must all listen to the story."

"Once upon a time there was a little boy, and his parents who loved him dearly, just as your Aunt Polly loves you, decided that they would send him away to college. They wanted him to grow up to be a perfect little gentleman, and in the little town where they lived, poor little Billy (for that was the little boy's name) did not have a chance to learn all the things that make little boys into little gentlemen, and besides, there was only one bootlegger in Billy's town, and Billy drank so much that his father could never get any liquor for himself."

"Why didn't they build a still themselves?" asked little Jimmy.

"Now, Jimmy," said Aunt Polly, "it is not very polite for little boys to interrupt like that."

"Now, to go on with my story. And the little boy went away, far away to Virginia, and went to college. Now what do you suppose that he learned at college?"

"How to drink corn without a chaser," said little Mary, clapping her hands.

"If you could learn to do that at college I would go myself," said Aunt Polly, "for I must confess, children, that even I cannot drink corn without a chaser."

"Maybe he went to college to learn to shoot pool," suggested little Jimmy.

COLLEGE LIFE

"No, Jimmy, you are wrong, too," said Aunt Polly who dearly loved to have the children try to guess what she was thinking about, for it stimulated their little brains almost as much as a good shot of bourbon. "He went to college, strange as it may seem, to study books and to learn all about everything."

"Did he learn the last verse of Mademoiselle From Armentiers?" asked little Jimmy. "That is one verse that I never can remember."

"No, children, he went to college to learn all about Napoleon and all the other great men."

"Did he learn about Haig and Haig?" asked little Mary.

"No, Mary," answered Aunt Polly, "they are considered ancients and are not studied any more at colleges. Anyhow, when little Billy arrived in Lexington he was met at the train by a group, in fact, by several groups of college men. One of these groups called themselves the Sig Chi's, and, children, when they spied little Billy they all began to sing, The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi. How nice, thought little Billy, to be able to go to college and to wear knickers and sing nice college songs like the one that the Sigma Chi's were singing. At last a tall, dark young man, wearing a striking Finchley suit, broke away from the group of singers and approached little Billy.

"Did he offer little Billy a drink?" asked Jimmy.

"No, Jimmy, the man that approached our little hero was none other than the dashing Gifford, and as you well know he never has offered anyone anything," replied Aunt Polly.

"Then Billy, before he could say Jack Robinson, found himself in a big Marmon, being whirled to the Sig Chi Lodge. When they arrived at the Sig Chi's chapter house, of course the first thing that the assembled brethren asked Billy was, if he had a car, and when little Billy, who was too poor to bring a car to school with him, replied that he had not, the horrid old Sigma Chi's turned him loose without even giving him their customary third degree."

"What is a third degree?" asked little Mary.

"I know, I know," said little Jimmy. "It's what mama gave papa when she caught him peeking through the keyhole into the new maid's room."

"Right," said Aunt Polly. "Now, Jimmy, for that you may have four fingers of Scotch in your highball tonight instead of the customary three." For Aunt Polly always rewarded the children whenever they gave a correct answer to any question.

"After Billy left the Sigma Chi house," went on Aunt Polly, "he went over to the Phi Gam house."

"Oh! I hope he didn't join the horrid old Phi Gam's," said little Mary. "I went to one of their house parties once and I had a hell of a rotten time. I didn't get a drop of good liquor the whole time that I was there."

"No, little Billy did not join the Phi Gam's, for little Billy did not own a pair of bell-bottom trousers, and Mary, I do wish that you would watch your English a bit more closely. You know that no little lady would ever think of saying 'rotten,'" said Aunt Polly who did not want the children to be lax in their speech.

"Where did little Billy go from there?" asked little Jimmy who had always been an inquisitive little boy and had even found where his dear Aunt Polly hid her liquor.

"Well, children, after little Billy left the Phi Gam house he went down to the A T O house," continued Aunt Polly. "Here our sturdy little hero was entertained royally, for you know that since Pop Taylor left school the A T O's have been sadly in need of good men."

"Why didn't they tell him about Bill Holt being President of the Student Body?" asked little Jimmy.

"They did, children, and they even had Bees Carruthers parade before him in his newest Finchley suit, but it was all to no avail, for little Billy was too wise to be caught in a trap like that. Then when the little man learned that Fitts had withdrawn from school he refused their pledge-button and left the house at once."

"Goodness," said little Jimmy, "he must have been a brave little boy to tell all those bold, bad A T O's to go to hell like that."

"Didn't they give him anything to drink?" asked little Mary.

"My gracious," said Aunt Polly, with a smile, "you children are regular question-boxes. No, Mary, the A T O's did not offer little Billy a drink, and now as to your question, Jimmy. Yes, Billy was a brave little boy, for as soon as he left the A T O house he went to the Phi Kap house, and you children both know from your readings in the Whiz Bang that the Phi Kap house is a bad place for innocent little Freshmen to go."

"Did Doug Bemis tell him the story about the young married couple?" asked little Jimmy.

"Yes, Jimmy, he did," said Aunt Polly. "You know that Doug could not fail to get off a good story if he had half a chance. The Phi Kap's even gave Billy a couple of drinks, and one of the boys took him over to the gym and taught him how to dive off the steps."

"How perfectly thrilling," said little Mary. "I wish that I were a boy so that I could get drunk and do things like that. Every time that I get tight, you or mother always puts me to bed and I always have to act like a little lady."

"You must not fret about that, dear," said Aunt Polly. "You know that you have never seen your Aunt Polly staggering up the street trying to hold more than she could carry."

"What about the time I saw you coming home from the Bricklayers' Ball with the policeman?" Asked little Jimmy.

"We will not talk about that," said Aunt Polly, who did not believe in allowing the children to tell all they knew about her and the policeman. "Mr. McGinty is a brave, good man, and what you saw that night was not a bit off-color, Jimmy. But we must get back to our story.

"After little Billy had drunk all the Phi Kap's under the table he went a 'way, 'way out to the Phi Psi house. The Phi Psi's saw him and ran out to meet him, carrying pictures of President Wilson and Eddie Cameron and also numerous bottles. What happened then is not at all to Billy's discredit, for you know he was pretty well under the weather when he started out there. Well, the bad old Phi Psi's saw that Billy was just about ready to pass out, so they gave him a couple more drinks, and the minute that poor little Billy fell over, Dick Jordan put a button in his lapel and Billy became a Phi Psi. In spite of this he grew to be a brave, good man and won every drinking bout in Rockbridge County."

"Hurrah for little Billy!" cried both children together.

"Now," said Aunt Polly, "you must both run off to bed." And after sipping their high-balls and getting Aunt Polly to promise that she would teach them all the verses to The Birds They Fly High in Mobile, the next evening, both children went happily to bed and were soon fast asleep.

Innocence Abroad

With the ORIGINAL Broadway cast: featuring "MINUTE MAN" WHITLEY.

(There's one born every minute.)

Three rousing acts of pathetic, soul-stirring emotion.

ACT ONE

SETTING: On Pullman en route to White Sulphur Springs. TIME: About nine bells after the evening repast of the customary soup which still lingers on the breath of the players.

VOICE FROM UPPER BERTH (Which is none other than that of our fearless hero) "Oh, fiddlesticks, fellows, I see where I don't sleep tonight. I can't even get in the hammock."

ACT TWO

SETTING: At the Greenbriar. TIME: Midnight or thereabouts. Group of men in tuxedos are seen through an open window. (N. B. The waiters.)

MANAGER WHITLEY: Emerging from closet just as the room-door closes behind departing bell-hop. He is smiling confidently. "Well, I sure beat that boy out of his tip."

ACT THREE

SETTING: Taxicab, back seat, there was no room upon the front seat for our hero, so he rode in back with the bourgeois. Large clock-affair, registering 55, staring the Minute Man in the face. Our hero, with face denoting horror and anxiety: "My Gawd! I hope he slows down for the next corner, we're doin' fifty-five miles an hour."

CHORUS: "That's not a speedometer—that's a taximeter."

WHITLEY: "Oh!"

Two blocks farther on, taxi comes to a dead halt behind a street car. Manager Whitley leans forward; deep concern is seen upon his mug: "Oh, driver, oh, driver, stop, stop the engine, you're running up the fare."

CHORUS OF UNDERFERD PLAYERS SING, WITH WAHOO McDONALD LEADING AS BEST HE CAN, "Oh, Where, Oh, Where, is My Wandering Boy Tonight?"

The curtain slowly descends as the manager passes out ONE SHINING SILVER DOLLAR for the next three meals.

DAVIDSON PARK

"You've kept me standing here for an hour like a fool."

"Really, Harry, it's not my fault how you look when you stand."

Campus Etiquette

A SUCCESSFUL BEGINNING

For a young man entering college there is nothing so essential as perfect behavior. It is a recognized fact that little unconscious mannerisms reflect the stamp of good breeding more than a Finchley suit, and an otherwise perfect college career may easily be spoiled by committing a breach of so-called etiquette. The following simple little rules might prove themselves well worth reading to the aspiring young Freshman.

Upon reaching Lexington, first be sure you are correctly clad. Most authorities on that subject recommend a modish checked suit, drab flannel shirt, walking shoes after the model of those popularized by our government in the recent European disturbances, and a cloth hat—preferably in harmony with the suit. Custom demands that socks and ties should be of the same subdued, solid color, red or green being most conservative.

When you have informed yourself as to the desirability of your attire, step confidently from the train, tip the conductor a small sum, and prepare to make your triumphant entry into the college city. Be sure to jostle all the Upperclassmen grouped about, because nothing is more effective for attracting attention than this well-mannered little practice, and no college man approves of a retiring young man who plans to enter his school. Make your way quietly in the direction followed by others, being sure to inquire from time to time the whereabouts of the college, of any chance Sophomore—addressing him affectionately as "buddy." When you have located the office building, place your carpetbag in a convenient corner, discard coat and hat, and pilfer a place in the line of matriculants as near the front as possible. You will first be accosted by some person who will say to you—"Subscribe to the CALYX." To which you reply, "Go to hell," in a well-modulated voice, and pass on.

Upon entering the registrar's office, take care to place yourself directly between the desk and the reference files, thereby insuring that you will be noticed when the assistant falls over you. Address the registrar as "Doctor," carefully concealing the fact that you know he is only an elderly student. After having received his authoritative criticism, pass on to the Dean, ignoring the treasurer's office, as the school doesn't really need your tuition fee. Joke freely with this person to show your sense of humor, and if possible tell him a well-selected story, for instance the one about Oliver Cromwell. Then make ready to enter the august presence of the University President. This formality is one of the most serious of matriculation and should be carried out with minute precaution. First make sure that a number of older men are in the office, then step easily in, approach the one you would take for the head of the Baptist Seminary back home, slap him on the back and say, "Hello, Lefty."

To which he will reply, "Ah, good morning, Mr. Jones, have one of my latest pamphlets." "My name's not Jones, it's Smith," you say. "Ah, surely, how forgetful of me. Let me see—you stayed at Mrs. Swink's last year."

"Hell, no"—impatiently—"I stayed at home with paw back in Arkansas."

"Ah, yes. I remember now, at first I thought that you were one of the commerce teachers. How abominably forgetful of me," he replies.

You then prepare yourself for a short discourse on engines and boxcars and go out to select a boarding house as near East Lexington as possible.

This student is committing a very grave social error when he says, "Of course, I won't dance with that girl, she hasn't enough clothes on." For a young man of good breeding should always be glad to dance with any girl, no matter what she may or may not be wearing.

JOINING A FRATERNITY

The following hints with regard to joining any fraternity you may decide upon may prove invaluable to the Freshman entering college.

How to Become a Sigma Nu

If you decide upon Sigma Nu, and don't wish to be too forward in effecting your alliance with them, this clever ruse is infallible. First secure a five-gallon keg of common corn whiskey, and after drinking a small amount, about a quart, set out down Washington Street with the remainder under your arm—cursing and yelling lustily. Stagger into the house, and after smashing out the front windows with your fist, seize the Victrola and gracefully crash it through the broken glass. If this action doesn't win you the applause and affection of every member, you have only to step out front and make a few well chosen profane remarks about the neighbors and Faculty, and you will be received unanimously by all the brothers.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE!

How to Become a Beta

The procedure of becoming a Beta is very easy. If you have neglected to get a pledge pin with your matriculation blank, simply walk into the Y. M. C. A., declare you sing in the choir, loathe cigarettes, were honor graduate in your prep school, or that you intend to try out for a managership, and your admission is assured.

How to Become a Sigma Chi

This club is also particularly easy to join. The simplest way is to secure some means of transportation—anything from a motorcycle to an Essex coach. If such cannot be obtained, stand on the street corner and sing "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" in a strained tenor voice, or tell one of the members you think Gifford looks frightfully cosmopolitan, and you should experience no difficulty in becoming a member.

AT COURT

No student is really of the elite until he has been initiated into the secrets of the local police court. An appointment is easily had by drinking that delightful beverage commonly called corn, and attempting to clean out the Greeks. When your meeting is entered on the blotter, the following formula should be observed.

Step into the court room appropriately late, raise your left hand and mumble the unintelligible ritual recited by the ex-butcher. "How's business?" you ask, sweetly.

"Where'd you get it?" he asks.

"Found it under the front steps. Where'd you?"

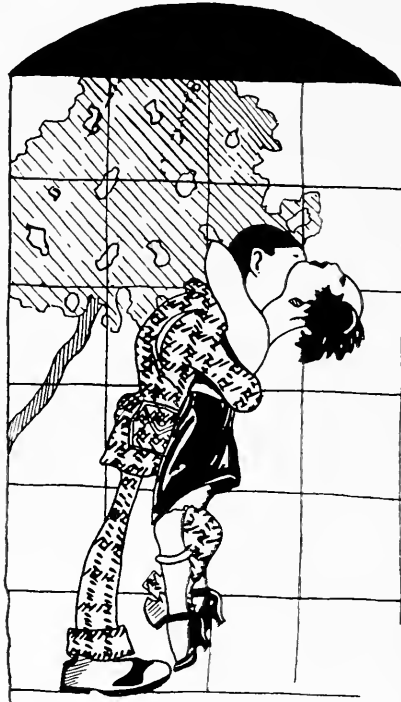

At which his face reddens all the way to his bald head and he says "5 and costs. I don't see why you damn' boys want to drink such rotten lieker. Got any more?"

At which you reply, simply, "I never go without."

Then he says "court's adjourned. The prisoner will remain for reprimand."

These little suggestions have been carefully compiled from keen observation and experience and their use by the unwise insures him against unnecessary embarrassments which are likely to arise when new at college. Careful study makes for perfection, and if one be carefully advised he will easily rise to a position of esteem among his fellow students which will brand him as a well bred man.

To Who The So Ever It May Concern A Sequel To Uncle Tom's Cabin

By H. C. WITWER

Like manys another layman, I had always thought that the "college humor" meant when Yale plays the New York Giants every year at the art of baseball, but they is stuff between the covers of this magazine as funny as any play I ever seen pulled off by Old Eli durin' them annual clashes of brains vs. brawn. Whilst I know that from my complete mastery of the English grammar it is hard to believe, I am not a college man myself. I am, however, a alumnus of the world's best known and largest university, which only recently give the formerly kaiser and his crown's prince a honorary degree—ie., the School of Experience.

At one stage of my sensationally career, I did go to Harvard. Of course, I admit I went there for the purposes of sellin' pennants at a football game, but I made $15.75 net and enjoyed college life immensely for the briefly period that I was there. Large quantities of my editorial acquaintances—which through editors is still my friends—have passed through the well known Cambridge, Mass., brain developin' plant, and I must say that Harvard shakes a mean graduate!

But they is one consolation I have when I look back on my past through a tears dimmed eye and think of all the dancin' I missed by not bein' committed to some college when a babe. That is the folleyin'—should the authorities have sent me to college I wouldst most doubtlessly of picked up a few tips on the English language and etc., and might of spent some time writin' the most perfect of grammar, prob'ly in the ledgers of some wealthy plumber for $25.00 the week. As it is, I can barely tell a gruff adjective from the festive preposition, but I am able to present the almshouse with a sarcastical smile.

However, I am goin' to forward the majority of my children to some tasty college as soon as they is enough vacancies therein. In my widely sought opinion, they is nothin' to equal a college education and all parents shouldst send their brood to some university, if only for the peace and quiet said parents will thereby get for several months a year.

In closin', I wouldst like to remark that if I wasn't past the draft age and couldst get eased into some college now, my choice is Vassar. I seen a picture of a class there the other day and if the baby which does the hirin' and firin' for the Ziegfeld Follies ever goes up there, he'll find enough material to stand Broadway on its ear 'til the St. Looey Browns appear in a World's Series!

Has the University Gone to the Dogs?

We may be wrong, but we can't see just where the University has gone to the dogs and is so much worse off now, as many calamity howlers and reformers would have us believe. From the following data, and many other facts we ran across by delving into the past, we are forced to conclude that Washington and Lee men now are much the same as they were "in the good old days."

Supposedly Statistics of Students in 1896-'97

"Some faint conceptions of the lofty and ideal virtues by which the students of Washington and Lee are characterized may be gathered from the following summary. Only forty per cent of them smoke. Ten per cent acknowledge that they flirt. Ninety per cent think they dance. Eighty per cent flunk occasionally. Seventy per cent admit they are in love. Eighty-five per cent claim that they are broke, and all are going to get married if they can."

Southern Champions

From the "History" of baseball of 1894, "gratefully dedicated to Sykes, the pitcher," we find that "a feature of the games then was the courtesies extended to the visiting teams. A supper with plenty of liquors and toasts always followed the game, and it was even said that on one occasion the Charlottesville merchants refused to take pay for purchases by our team!" These might well be described as "the good old days when I was in college," by Granny who was a member of that team.

Center Rush

In the Alumni column of the '94 CALYX, one of our present profs is mentioned: "Hale Houston accepted a position in Pantops Academy where he teaches mathematics and plays center rush on the second eleven in football time." Here's a chance for another coach.

Fraternity Spirit

Fraternity Spirit in the days of old took peculiar form, as is exemplified by a few yells taken from the CALYX of 1894.

Hippi! Hippi! Hi!
Rip! Zip! Zelta!
Fizz! Boom! Ah! Ha!
Phi Gamma Delta!

Hi! Rickety! Hoopty Do!
What's the matter with Sigma Nu?
Terra-ga-hoo! Hulla Balloo!
Lambda Chapter, Sigma Nu!

Who! Who! Who am I?
I'm a loyal Sigma Chi!

Observation Train

The Princeton-Harvard boat races didn't have a thing on the races down on North River. Listen to this—"In '82 an observation train followed the race for the first time, but the following year a new boat house was built above the dam and the races have been over the mile course ever since."

Hon. Miles Poindexter

Predicting future successes was evidently a strong point of the '04 CALYX staff. For example, here's what they had to say about Ambassador Miles Poindexter—"Miles Poindexter never did anything half way when at college, whether on the football field or on the speakers' platform, and when he started west he went all the way. He has been elected commonwealth's attorney out in Washington. May his honors multiply."

President of Finals —a Trustee

In these days of Faculty and Trustee supervision of the dances it might be well for them to think of the past. About one of our Trustees: "A large majority, both of students and calics, think W. A. Bell of Louisiana the best dancer in college. It is fitting that the Final Ball president should be so." And they want to cut down on Finals.

George Himself

Nearly thirty years have made little changes in the standards of enjoyment. Reading of the Finals of '96, we were startled to discover "Half-past ten; from its height, the statue of Washington looked down on carriage lamps moving to and fro, while the laughter of dimly-seen couples strolling across the Campus was heard again and again. . . . then slowly, with a supreme effort, the venerable figure turned his head to gaze on the brightly-lighted place of revelry, for had the day not been when he, too, would put on his finest waistcoat and best powdered wig to dance with the beauties of Auld Lang Syne? The strains of music were borne softly up to his ear, and he pictured the brilliant scene below; he thought of fair women at their prettiest and men at their best; of the careless joy and gaiety that ruled in each breast; of the soul-stirring music that made each heart fill with tenderest sentiments; of words that meant volumes, and looks that meant more; he thought of it all, and smiled, with a sigh. But dawn has stolen up too soon. The goddess of the dance reluctantly takes her leave, and the night's gaiety dies away."

And, again, "Show an old college man some souvenir of Commencement, he will think of the calics first, and of commencement second."

Granny

Everyone knows of "Granny's" commendable support of athletics. A glance at the annuals during the period that he was a student tells why. No football or baseball picture was complete without him. Incidentally, he captained both the football eleven and baseball nine his last year.

Certain ideas of the past days still hold good. Listen to the following poetical expression in the '98 CALYX:

Holding her dainty hand in mine,
So softly white in form and line,
I swear its beauty doth outshine
The Graces.

But Man is faithless, heartless, cold,
And so tonight tight-clasped, I hold
Another hand of fairer mould—
Four Aces.

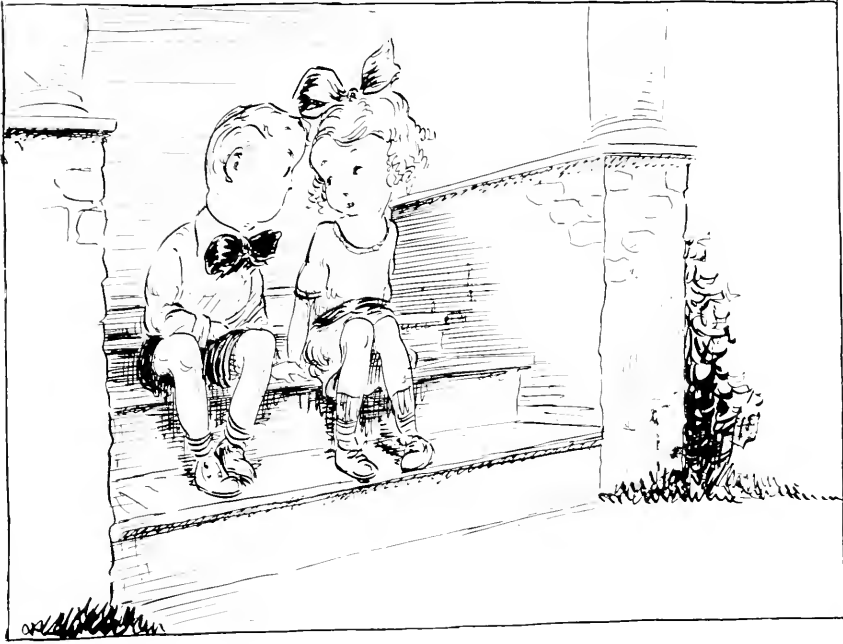

This from Preston's.

Oskay wow wow,
Whiskey bow bow,
Ola Mucka Bum,
Preston! Preston!
Rum! Rum! Rum!

The Ranches

Before the days of Fraternity houses, Campus groups were evidently recognized by their respective boarding houses. We find in the "College life" section of the 1897 CALYX, considerable space devoted to setting forth the alleged characteristics of the patrons of different boarding houses. They even had yells

Have we changed?—We ask you?

They're All the Same

I'll admit I used to love you,
But you women are all alike.
I picked you daisies in the daytime,
And brought you candy every night.
I held your hand and squeezed it,
And for your heart I tried;

But when I asked you if you loved me,
This, sweetly, you replied,
"I like you lots, dear Johnnie,
And I'll be a sister, sweet, to you."
But I found you out in time,
And now, thank God, I'M THROUGH!

Hail to thee, Twenty-three,
For many men of mighty deeds
Are counted in thy throng—
Amazed is he who, wond'ring, reads
The record of thy exploits strong
At Washington and Lee!

All honor to a glorious class!

Entering as the first matriculates after the war, its members promptly threw themselves with loyal ardor into every phase of Campus life, in none of which have they failed to excel.

Beginning with half their men on the football team and effectually overlooking the Sophomore V. C., so bewildered at its task, they undertook successfully to be assimilated by their own efforts. That was the year that the annual pushball fight was discontinued, and it was not '23 that punctured the ball; the year that the paint industry was boosted by the memorable celebration after the Georgia Tech victory; when the library dome emblazoned shining numerals; ah, that was the year the Seniors wrote mournfully in the year book. "The Freshmen are running away with the University."

Among other early movements be it noted that as Freshmen they tackled with pick and shovel the labor of enlarging the athletic field, whence they were called only by assurances that it would be done. A dominant characteristic of this class is the perfect understanding of its members. On questions affecting them as a body they have always stood united, with neither fear nor favor.

With meteoric swiftness, Campus leaders developed and took over the reins of many important enterprises. Athletes, literati, classroom sharks, business managers, editors, billiard players, good fellows, and Statesmen, all of the first rank, are found in its galaxy of brilliance. In politics they have long held weighty sway.

It is a proud boast of '23 that since their second year at College, more of their men have been counted in every major campus activity than those of rival classes. This is a matter of statistics. With a President of the Student Body, two vice-presidents, a secretary and a veteran cheerleader, they have had almost a majority of the Executive Committee for the last two years and claim a record number of "Circle" men.

The numbers of old '23 have diminished in the four years, as numbers will, but the flower of the class is left. When they are enrolled in June among the ranks of Alumni as well-rounded and hard-trained men of Washington and Lee, they pass on the torch of service with a consciousness of work well done and vows of eternal fidelity to Alma Mater.

Long live '23!

Thanks to the unflagging and loyal efforts of one Dick Smith, the athletic field is as last large enough for us to dream of a real stadium. Contributions daily make certain the steel and concrete for construction. With the added endeavors of a few more energetic souls of his specification we strain hopeful orbs to see its foundations rise in sufficient grandeur to encompass our filiu. Achati in safety and security.

WHILE we are on the theme of deeds of glory, who knows the men of yore? We speak of arms and the men whose helmeted figures still charge in spirit and trample the sod with might—those heroes of the misty times, much vaunted in song and story, whose modesty left no tangible traces for pygmy posterity. Let us have a Trophy Room for the peeled pigs' hides and those legendary scores of which the graving Alumnus relates with proper pride. Shall memories grow dimmer yet? From Granny Campbell's hillside clout to Johnny Barrett at Cornell and the rest, let's pass them on, and keep them all at W and L.

SINCE there has been a quantity of deliberative palaver if not for the valid reasons involved, the monogram scale should be shaken and then sifted down to systematic form. There are so many letters on the Campus besides those that the ambitious boys string after their names that really it is an intricate task to find out just what a man wears and why. Not that they are not all the proper stuff and all that, but it wouldn't be such a bad idea to make more distinction between major and minor wearers of the trident, and to set it down somewhere convenient to refer to when checking up.

WE pause to give the local lawmakers a merited boost on their paths to the national forum. The road of the politician lies in smoothness, but the way of the Statesman is upward narrowly. Full faith and credit should go to the retiring Executive Committee for efficiency and judgment. President Holt and his colleagues have done genuine and permanent service to the Student Body which they led. Good government requires trained leaders to solve its problems. This time they were well chosen and are justly praised for the work of their hands.

IN bestowing our Spring bouquets, another goes to the journalistic lads. The Publication Board has carried through its year of embarkation upon uncharted waters as if it had been backed by sound cumulative experience. The machinery is adequate. All the publications are expanding, and for the first period in many balance sheets they are on a banker's basis. Co-operation guarantees satisfaction.

A MODERN auditorium is needed for general University functions. Aside from the unavoidable sacrifice that would be done to Lee Chapel by any material enlargement, that shrine cannot be changed to sufficiently anticipate the demands of the sessions that are to come. No amount of theoretical argument can overcome the deeply imbedded sentiment of the first point, nor can blueprints refute the second. For assemblies, rallies, dramatics and secular meetings in general, another building is a practical necessity. Of course, money must be forthcoming, but why not?

At the same time that the chapel is fireproofed—and it should not be long—it would be a sane move to install a sprinkler apparatus in Washington College. Remember the little scare of windy March.

UNDER the existing plan of organization, it has been a custom for the various graduating classes to consider themselves more or less immiscible. There is in truth, no reason, no justification of this policy. Each year one class fares forth, and it should be one class together, regardless of law, arts, commerce, or science. The dance and banquet, as well as routine meetings, could logically be held as those of the Senior Class. There is no gainsaying that, however rich in hoary legends in the mass, we are deficient in class customs and traditions. Wouldn't it gladden the cockles of your heart to look forward to a stated time each year for your class to meet again at the old place and re-live the golden days? Permanent or annual organization should be effected at Finals, and at least a president and an editor of a class annual be elected. Closer concentration of our Alumni means, "the White and Blue forever."

LIGHT and heat in the libraries would certainly improve them for Sunday reading. Monday assignments show no peculiar earmarks, and say—did you ever work on Saturday night? Neither do our fratres in facillate.

WHERE is the once valiant band that blared forth defiance to the invader and struck up the first sweet notes of victory? Here's an opportunity for some loyal leather-lunged musician to gather the fifers and the drummers around the battle banner. The ever-magic strains of the "Swing" must float upward with the first kick-off of the season. "Fight, Fight, Blue and White" is being published, as also that grand old stirring classic, "Onward for Alma Mater." These all are strictly Washington and Lee war-songs and should not be suffered to languish for lack of silver throats.

An Appreiation

Just as newspapers are not complete without editorials, Annuals do not appear finished without an appreciative word to the contributors. However, in writing this bit of thanks to those who have so willingly and unselfishly helped us, we are honestly sincere and not merely respectful in what we say. So many "appreciations" are written because of a polite custom, that we hesitate to use that word in an effort to convey our gratitude for the aid received on this CALYX.

In deep thankfulness for the unselfishness of a hard-working staff and for the valuable contributions, assistance, and suggestions of a host of others, we feel incapable of singling out individuals for praise.

So when you read this volume created through hard and sincere work, share with us the admiration of the publishers' (Baker, Jones, Hausauer, Inc.) art; the photographers' (White's Studio) rare skill; the staff's artistry, originality, and zest; the article by Dr. Henry Louis Smith; Coles Phillips' genius and generosity; the art work of Overlander and Waugh, and a thousand other attributes which, we hope, go to make this CALYX of everlasting interest and enjoyment to all who love Washington and Lee.

THE EDITORS

Three Hundred Fifty-nine

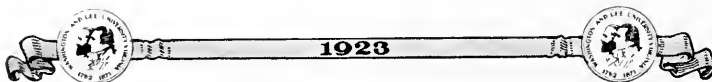

Alma Mater

In submitting this volume of the CALYX to the students of Washington and Lee University, we feel, as did a former Board of Editors, whose pardon we ask, that the obligations of our trust would not be fulfilled without a word of tribute to our Alma Mater.

An Indiana poet has beautifully said: "The heart of the South beats at Lexington." Here we have an ideal setting for a great University. Our surroundings are guarded over by the memories of those two matchless heroes whom the world delights to honor and whom the South holds in sacred reverence. The school we love so well is not endowed with her countless millions, but she is rich in these qualities which money cannot buy, nor the hand of time destroy. Here we are not beset by the alluring call of materialism, but the example of Washington and the life of Lee are held up to lead young manhood upon the ways of usefulness in life. We have been permitted to drink freely of the waters of life, and when we are scattered in the world as acorns before a wintry blast, let us ever keep sacred in our memories the teachings we received at the hands of our Alma Mater, and when we become discontented upon life's dreary way, let us find solace in the sentiment of the poet who penned:

"By the banks of old North river, winding lazy 'round the hill,
To the dear old college campus my thoughts are turning still;
For the college bells are calling, and I know they say to me,
'Come you back, you old Alumnus, back to Washington and Lee.'"

"Ship me back to old Virginia, where the summer skies are blue,
Where the gods walk on the hilltops in the sunset's rosy hue;
For I've heard their voices calling, and it's there that I would be,
In the shadow of the mountains, back at Washington and Lee."

BEAUTIFUL forms and compositions are not made by chance, nor can they ever, in any material, be made at small expense.—RUSKIN

Printing that will always be a Cherished Possession

THE production of books, programs, and calendars for the students of America's Universities requires an ability to originate printed forms that will be cherished possessions in the mellow years that follow a University career.

In the libraries of many of the "old-grads" will be found books, programs, and announcements preserved for their intimate memories and associations.

It is the production of this kind of printing that has brought to this organization its frequent opportunities to serve University men and women.

When the urge is for something better, we will welcome an opportunity to submit ideas.
